10 Plaintiff,

11 v.

12 SAFEWAY INC,

13 Defendant.

CASE NO. C21-0626-JCC

15 This matter comes before the Court on Defendant's motion for summary judgment (Dkt.
16 No. 9). Having thoroughly considered the parties' briefing and the relevant record, the Court 17 DENIES Defendant's motion for the reasons explained below.

18 I. BACKGROUND

19 On January 12, 2020, Plaintiff Alicia Vander Woude<sup>1</sup> parked her car and walked through 20 the parking lot to Defendant's Safeway store in Mount Vernon, Washington. (Dkt. No. 10-3 at 21 6.) It was snowing when she arrived. (Id. at 7.) Conditions were very wet, and the parking lot 22 contained "old snow" and "slush here and there." (Dkt. Nos. 14-16 at 12-13, Dkt. No. 14-17 at 23 11.) The parties have submitted still frames from store cameras,<sup>2</sup> which show Plaintiff walking

25 <sup>1</sup> Although Alicia and Louis Vander Woude both appear to be Plaintiffs, the Court refers to the former as "Plaintiff" and the latter as "Mr. Vander Woude" to avoid confusion.

26 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiff's video freeze-frames are not properly authenticated, with each image attached to a separate, apparently unsworn affidavit from her counsel who states, without professing to have

1 into the store across a carpeted foyer. (See, e.g., Dkt. Nos. 11-1, 11-2.) As she moves toward the 2 smooth interior floor, she appears to leave soggy footprints on the carpet. (Dkt. Nos. 11-1 at 4–5, 3 11-2 at 1–2.) Then, with her right foot planted on the juncture of the carpeting and the smooth 4 floor, she takes a step with her left foot and loses her balance as soon as she begins to shift her 5 weight onto that foot. (See generally Dkt. No. 11-2; Dkt. Nos. 14-8–14-10.) Her feet slide 6 forward, and she falls over backward. (Dkt. Nos. 11-2 at 6–10, 14-9 at 2, 14-10 at 2.) The images 7 show what look like streaks of dirt or grime extending from her sliding heels, though these marks 8 could also be interpreted as shadows or reflections on the floor. (Dkt. No. 11-2 at 7–10.)

9 After falling, Plaintiff immediately called Mr. Vander Woude, who drove to the store 10 where he found a parking lot containing “a mixture of slush and snow approximately two inches 11 deep.” (Dkt. No. 15 at 2.)<sup>3</sup>

12 Still shots from immediately before Plaintiff’s fall show that the patch of floor where she 13 slipped had a smooth, shiny surface that reflected the overhead light fixtures. (Dkt. Nos. 11-1 at 14 1–4, 14-3 at 2.) Plaintiff Louis Vander Woude states he has previously seen Defendant’s 15 employees buffing the floor to a high polish. (Dkt. No. 15 at 2.) Before Plaintiff entered the 16 store, other patrons also left soggy footprints on the foyer carpet. (Dkt. No. 14-1 at 2, 14-3 at 2), 17 including a bearded man who entered the store about 40 seconds before Plaintiff. (See Dkt. Nos.
18 14-7 at 2 (timestamp: 5:24:00.051 PM); 14-8 at 2 (timestamp: 5:24:38.819 PM).) Plaintiff states 19 that the “floor was wet . . . and dangerous when I stepped on it,” (Dkt. No. 14-15), but admits 20 that she did not look at the floor before or after she fell and did not wipe her boots off on the

22 personal knowledge, that each image is a “true and correct copy” of a photo taken at a particular 23 time. (See, e.g., Dkt. No. 14-2 at 1.) However, Defendant does not object to this, and Plaintiff 24 could indeed present these images in a form that would be admissible at trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P.
56(c)(2), (4); Fed. R. Evid. 901.

25 <sup>3</sup> Plaintiff’s friend Enriqueta Rodea also states in her declaration that the parking lot had two to 26 three inches of snow. (Dkt. No. 16 at 1.) Ms. Rodea’s declaration is untimely. (Id.; see also Dkt.
No. 12); W.D. Wash. Local Civ. R. 7(d)(3). However, Defendant does not ask the Court to strike this declaration, and in any event, striking it would not alter the Court’s decision on this motion.

1 carpet. (Dkt. No. 10-3 at 10, 15.)

2 Images from right after Plaintiff's fall appear to show the feet of her brown boots soaked 3 with moisture. (Dkt. Nos. 14-11 at 2, 14-12 at 2; see also 14-16 at 23 (employee testimony that 4 boots looked wet because they were dark in patches).) Smudges of dirt are visible on the floor 5 where Plaintiff slipped. (Dkt. No. 14-14 at 2.) But while the smudges were not there before 6 Plaintiff's fall, the Court cannot see any liquid on the floor in either the "before" or "after" 7 pictures, (compare id., with Dkt. No. 14-4 at 2), which suggests that the image resolution may 8 not be high enough to show any liquid there might have been at either time.

9 Defendant's Mount Vernon store had three persons in charge (PICs) whose duties 10 included overseeing safety conditions in the store. (Dkt. No. 14-16 at 8.) The PICs supervise 11 courtesy clerks to ensure that spills inside the store are marked with cones, cleaned up, and dried.
12 (Dkt. No. 14-16 at 7–8.) Additionally, courtesy clerks take hourlong turns patrolling the store, 13 including entryways and exits, looking for and cleaning up hazards. (Dkt. Nos. 14-16 at 9–10, 14 14-17 at 25–28.)

15 If it is raining outside, then the courtesy clerks "always" place warning cones outside of 16 the store entry doors. (Dkt. No. 14-16 at 10.) Additionally, "if it's snowing . . . or . . . if there is a 17 lot of snow being brought in or if it's raining heavily," store personnel put warning cones just 18 inside the entryway and throughout the store "[j]ust to keep reminding people . . . that floors 19 could be slippery." (Id. at 10–11 (additional cones are placed inside the entry if there are one to 20 three inches of snow).) Courtesy clerks are trained to place outdoor cones whenever it is raining, 21 but the record suggests that they do not place the additional indoor cones unless directed to do so 22 by store management. (Dkt. No. 14-17 at 29–30.)

23 It is undisputed that there were no cones or cautionary markers inside the store entrance 24 when Plaintiff fell. (See generally Dkt. No. 11-1.) And despite the testimony that cones were 25 "always" outside the store if conditions were wet, there is no testimony from anyone who 26 personally saw outdoor cones on the day Plaintiff fell. (See generally Dkt. Nos. 10-3, 14-16, 14-

1 17.) Defendant contends that one of the cones is visible in the camera images “just behind the 2 glass panel with the red sign,” (Dkt. No. 17 at 6 (citing Dkt. Nos. 11-1 at 5, 14-9 at 2)), but, as 3 evident from the screenshot below, the vague yellowish pixels in the place Defendant describes 4 are not sufficient for the Court to say as a matter of law that the image shows a cone outside the 5 store entrance.

20 Defendant’s employees are aware that winter conditions can lead to customers tracking 21 moisture into the store on their feet, so store staff take extra precautions in such circumstances.
22 (Dkt. Nos. 14-16 at 11, 14-17 at 23.) Staff do not take these precautions, however, just for rain or 23 for a slush mix—only for snow. (Dkt. No. 14-17 at 23–24.)

24 Plaintiffs filed this case in state court in December 2020, asserting a single negligence 25 claim. (Dkt. No. 2.) Defendant removed to this Court in May 2021, after receiving a discovery 26 response indicating that Plaintiffs seek more than $75,000 in damages. (Dkt. No. 1 at 2.)

1 II. DISCUSSION

2 A. Discovery Disputes

3 The parties' briefing presents various discovery disputes: Defendant initially sought an 4 adverse inference based on Plaintiff's apparent spoliation of the boots she wore during her fall; 5 but the boots were later found, and Defendant withdrew its spoliation argument. (Dkt. Nos. 9 at 6 4–5; 15 at 2; 17 at 10.) The Court considers the matter of the boots to be resolved.

7 Plaintiff also asserts that discovery remains outstanding on several key issues. (Dkt. No.
8 14 at 10–11). However, she does not formally request a continuance or deferral under Rule 9 56(d), nor does she submit an affidavit or declaration from her counsel that would satisfy its 10 requirements for a continuance. Accordingly, the Court will decide Defendant's motion.

11 B. Legal Standard

12 Summary judgment is proper if “there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and 13 the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). The Court views 14 facts in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and resolves ambiguity in that party's 15 favor, but it must not make credibility determinations or weigh evidence. See Anderson v.
16 Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248–49, 255 (1986); Bator v. Hawaii, 39 F.3d 1021, 1026 (9th 17 Cir. 1994). Even if the material facts are largely undisputed, summary judgment may still be 18 improper if “the evidence is susceptible of different interpretations or inferences by the trier of 19 fact.” Hunt v. Cromartie, 526 U.S. 541, 553 (1999). The moving party has the initial burden to 20 show the lack of a genuine issue for trial. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). If 21 that party succeeds, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to demonstrate there is an issue for 22 trial. See id. at 323–24.

23 C. Analysis

24 A negligence claim requires a plaintiff to show that the defendant breached a duty it 25 owed to her and that she suffered an injury of which the breach was the proximate cause. See 26 Johnson v. Liquor & Cannabis Bd., 486 P.3d 125, 130–31 (Wash. 2021). In a slip-and-fall

1 premises liability case, this requires the plaintiff to establish that the property owner had actual 2 or constructive notice of a dangerous condition that injured the plaintiff. Id. at 130. Even without 3 evidence of actual or constructive notice, a plaintiff can establish duty and breach if “the nature 4 of the proprietor’s business and his methods of operation are such that the existence of unsafe 5 conditions on the premises is reasonably foreseeable.” Pimentel v. Roundup Co., 666 P.2d 888, 6 893 (Wash. 1983). The Washington Supreme Court has suggested that this “foreseeability 7 exception” applies in cases involving tracked-in rain or snow: A plaintiff need not show that a 8 defendant “knew of the specific puddle that caused the accident; rather, defendant’s knowledge 9 of the floor’s tendency to get slippery when wet, coupled with the knowledge of the wet weather 10 conditions on the day of the fall, made the specific condition reasonably foreseeable.” Iwai v.
11 State Emp’t Sec. Dep’t, 915 P.2d 1089, 1097 (Wash. 1996) (citing Wyoming and Mississippi 12 court decisions).

13 Defendant argues that summary judgment is proper because Plaintiff presents no 14 evidence that there was a dangerous condition that proximately caused her fall. (Dkt. No. 9 at 5– 15 7.) Defendant argues that there was nothing on the floor where Plaintiff slipped when she 16 stepped there, that any wetness was tracked in by Plaintiff herself; per Defendant, the real culprit 17 was the “unusual boots” Plaintiff wore, which had a “fabric or textile sole.” (Dkt. No. 9 at 2 18 (photo of boot sole), 6–7.) These arguments fail. For starters, it is impossible for the Court to 19 determine from the images provided what Plaintiff’s boot soles are made of—whether felt, 20 suede, or heavily worn rubber—or how much traction they did or did not provide. Similarly, the 21 image resolution of the parties’ photo evidence is too low for the Court to determine whether 22 there was any moisture on the floor before Plaintiff stepped on it. (compare Dkt. No. 14-14 at 2 23 (post-fall picture showing dirt on floor with no visible liquid), with Dkt. No. 14-4 at 2 (pre-fall 24 photo showing clean floor with no visible liquid).) Moreover, the floor was highly polished; 25 conditions that day were wet, snowy, or slushy; and Defendant’s personnel knew that the floor 26 could become slippery when wet and had practices in place to address that risk. (Dkt. Nos. 11-1 1 at 1–4; 14-16 at 12–13; 14-17 at 11, 23–24; 15 at 2.)

2 Even if the floor was dry before Plaintiff took that first step, Pimentel's foreseeability 3 rule means that Plaintiff tracking in the very moisture that caused her fall may not preclude 4 liability (although, as Plaintiff points out, her own negligence could potentially reduce recovery 5 under Washington's comparative fault regime). (See Dkt. No. 14 at 8); Wash. Rev. Code 6 §§ 4.22.005, 4.22.070.

7 Moreover, there are numerous conflicts in the record from which a jury could reasonably 8 find the existence of a dangerous condition that caused, or that combined with Plaintiff's 9 footwear to cause, her alleged injury. For example, although the record suggests that cones were 10 "always" set up outside the store when it rained, a factfinder could reasonably view the 11 photographic evidence as showing that there were no cones. (Compare Dkt. No. 14-16 at 10 12 (courtesy clerks "always" set cones if it is raining), with Dkt. No. 11-1 at 5 (video still).)

13 Similarly, it is undisputed that there were no warning cones inside the store, and there is a 14 factual issue about whether conditions were such that Defendant's employees should have placed 15 warning cones inside the store if they had been following their usual procedures. PIC Diana 16 Greenough testified that the standard practice is to place cones inside the store if there are one to 17 three inches of accumulated snow or "if it's snowing . . . or . . . if there is a lot of snow being 18 brought in or if it's raining heavily." (Dkt. No. 14-16 at 10–11.) Plaintiff's evidence suggests that 19 there was falling snow and up to two inches of snow and slush in the store parking lot. (See, e.g., 20 Dkt. Nos. 10-3 at 7; 15 at 1–2; 16 at 1.) Ms. Greenough's deposition testimony does not refute 21 this. (Dkt. No. 14-16 at 12–13). There is thus an issue of material fact about whether Defendant 22 departed from its usual practice of placing warning markers inside the store for wintry 23 conditions. There is also an issue of material fact about whether moisture tracked onto the foyer 24 carpet by other patrons or the highly polished floor surface played a role in Plaintiff's injury.
25 (See Dkt. Nos. 11-1 at 1–4; 14-1 at 2; 14-3 at 2; 14-7 at 2; 14-8 at 2; 15 at 2.)

26 In short, this case hinges on issues of foreseeability and causation, and some of the most

1 probative evidence consists of imagery that is open to interpretation. As such, it is not amenable 2 to summary judgment.

3 III. CONCLUSION

4 For the foregoing reasons, Defendant’s motion for summary judgment (Dkt. No. 9) is
