PLAINTIFF'S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

The Ninth Circuit remanded this case for further proceedings “to develop the record on Major Witt’s substantive due process claim,” and directed that the relevant factual inquiry be made on an as-applied basis. Witt v. Department of the Air Force, 527 F.3d 806, 819, 821 (9th Cir. 2008). The relevant inquiry is “not whether DADT has some hypothetical, posthoc rationalization in general, but whether a justification exists for the application of the policy as applied to Major Witt.” Id. at 819. Despite these clear instructions, defendants seek to prevent Witt from developing the record by preventing her from deposing members of the 446th because it would be too “disruptive.”

On remand, in response to interrogatories asking them to identify any person known to hold the opinion that the presence within the 446th of a person known to be a

1 lesbian would have a negative impact on unit morale, unit discipline or unit cohesion, the 2 defendants identified two witnesses: Colonel Janette Moore-Harbert and Colonel Mary 3 Walker.<sup>1</sup> Without objection from defendants these two witnesses were deposed. The 4 testimony they gave did not support the government's contention. For example, when 5 asked what evidence she had to support her opinion that reinstatement of Witt would have 6 a negative impact on the morale, discipline or cohesion of the 446th, Moore-Harbert 7 finally answered, "I have no evidence."<sup>2</sup> And when Colonel Walker was asked if she had 8 "ever held the opinion that Major Witt's presence in the 446th has a negative impact on 9 unit cohesion or morale," she answered, "No."<sup>3</sup>

10 Although the Government did not object to the plaintiff deposing the witnesses 11 that it had identified as supporting the Government's position in this case, as soon as Witt 12 began noting the depositions of witnesses who are expected to give testimony favorable to 13 her, the Government filed the present motion seeking to prevent these depositions from 14 taking place. These deponents will give testimony demonstrating that the unit had a 15 culture of acceptance of gay and lesbian service members and that the reinstatement of 16 Major Witt, a known lesbian, will have no negative effect on unit cohesion, morale or 17 discipline.<sup>4</sup>

18 The Government contends that these depositions will be burdensome to the 19 deponents. And yet the deponents make no such claim. Some of those that plaintiff has 20 been able to contact have sworn directly to the contrary.<sup>5</sup> Moreover, as the declaration of 1 SMSgt. James Schaffer shows, efforts have been made to prevent Witt's attorneys from 2 interviewing witnesses in the 446th.<sup>6</sup>

3 The bottom line is that the Government has no objection if plaintiff wants to 4 depose the witnesses whom the Government has already identified as witnesses favoring 5 their position (although as it turns out, Colonel Walker ultimately gave testimony that she 6 did not hold the opinion that the Government claimed she held in its interrogatory 7 responses), but it objects strenuously if Witt wants to depose witnesses who can be 8 expected to provide information favorable to her.

9 In support of its position that discovery should be selectively forbidden (only the 10 Government's identified partisans can be deposed), the Government fails to cite a single 11 case. Indeed, the Government cites no case that holds that a deposition was too disruptive to 12 the military function to be permitted. The Ninth Circuit has already held that this lawsuit 13 was properly brought and that the facts need to be fully litigated so that the heightened 14 constitutional scrutiny can be applied to Witt's due process claim.

15 II. STATEMENT OF PERTINENT FACTS

16 In assessing whether it would harm unit morale or cohesion if Witt were reinstated 17 to duty in the 446th, it is highly relevant to consider the past experience of the 446th with 18 servicemembers who were widely known throughout the unit to be gay or lesbian.
19 Moore-Harbert testified at her deposition that in her entire career in the Air Force she "did 20 not remember" anyone ever telling her that they knew, or believed, or suspected, that 21 some other member of the Air Force was gay or lesbian. Moore-Harbert Dep. 78:11-22 79:24. When asked if she had ever suspected anyone in the Air Force of being gay or 23 lesbian, Moore-Harbert answered, "I don't know." Id. at 80:7.

24 Indeed, unit members to be deposed are expected to provide testimony that several 25 _____

26 <sup>6</sup> James Schaffer (Ret.) Decl. ¶¶ 7 & 12

1 members of the 446th were known to be gay or lesbian by most other unit members and 2 there was no negative effect on unit morale or discipline. Major Heather Julian, the wife 3 of deponent Stacey Julian, declares:

4 I believe that over the past decade 5 or 6 different people who are gay or 5 lesbian have served in the 446th, that virtually everyone in the unit had the 6 same beliefs, and that no one had any problem with their serving in the unit.<sup>7</sup>

7 Moore-Harbert was asked by name if she ever suspected particular individuals of 8 being gay or lesbian. This was done not because the plaintiff needed to discover the 9 sexual orientation of these individuals, but to see whether Moore-Harbert suspected or 10 had knowledge of the unit culture, and whether she would admit this under oath.<sup>8</sup> She 11 did not. Indeed, Moore-Harbert denied knowing two women in the unit were lesbians.
12 Thereafter, when confronted with questions about her having issued letters of 13 admonishment and counseling for improper fraternization to two female servicemembers 14 who had been involved in a domestic violence incident while living together off-base, 15 Moore-Harbert denied she knew that their sexual orientation was lesbian, said “I don’t 16 know” when asked if it crossed her mind, and insisted that all she knew was that they 17 were rooming together and that one was under the command of the other.<sup>9</sup>

18 One of the witnesses scheduled to be deposed is expected to testify that one of 19 these two lesbian servicemembers was angry with her because she suspected (incorrectly) 20 that the deponent had outed her to Colonel Moore-Harbert. The deponent went to Moore-21 Harbert and asked her to explain to the angry officer that she (the deponent) had not outed 22 her, and that Moore-Harbert had learned of her sexual orientation from a police report

24 many years and everyone knows this . . . and no one cared.”) See also Lobsenz Decl. ¶ 11 App. B, redacted, 25 where a servicemember states that most people in the unit already know of the servicemember’s relationship 26 with a “partner.”

1 regarding the domestic violence incident.<sup>10</sup> Moore-Harbert granted this request and 2 explained to the lesbian servicemember that the deponent had not outed her.

3 Other deponents are expected to testify, consistent with the declaration of retired 4 SMSgt. Schaffer that beginning as early as the spring of 2006, Colonel Moore-Harbert 5 personally ordered the members of the 446th not to cooperate with Witt's legal team:

6 We were addressed at that meeting by Colonel Janette Moore-Harbert, the 7 commanding officer of the 446th AES.

8 Colonel Moore-Harbert told us that there have been some issues raised with 9 respect to Major Margaret Witt and the Don't Ask Don't Tell policy of the 10 armed forces. She explained that there have been legal issues raised and 11 that lawyers for Major Witt had been "poking around." She told us that we were not allowed to talk to Major Witt's lawyers in any way, shape or form. She instructed us that if we were contacted by anyone, we should refer the person who contacted them to Public Affairs.<sup>11</sup>

12 At her own deposition, Moore-Harbert testified that MSgt. Stacey Julian told her he 13 had been contacted by Witt's attorneys and [he] was requesting or asking what he should 14 do."<sup>12</sup> But as Major Heather Julian's declaration attests, her husband "wants" to talk to 15 Major Witt's legal team but he can't until the interview is approved by the Air Force."<sup>13</sup>

16 Since Witt was suspended from the 446th in November of 2004, and later discharged, 17 there have been a number of events, such as retirement ceremonies for individual members<sup>14</sup> 18 and celebrations of the 40th anniversary of the unit, which Witt has attended. Some of these 19 events were held on base. Moore-Harbert testified at her deposition that although she 20 attended SMSgt. Schaffer's retirement ceremony, she did not remember that the attending 21 members of the 446th gave Witt a standing ovation at that ceremony that was held off base in 22 late 2007 after this lawsuit had been filed.<sup>15</sup> Moore-Harbert was forced to acknowledge the

1 fact that the 446th gave Witt a commemorative photo of the 446th as a present, although she 2 claimed not to remember signing it.<sup>16</sup> She claimed not to recall that Major Witt also received 3 a bouquet of roses.<sup>17</sup> The witnesses scheduled to be deposed are expected to provide 4 evidence of these events which Colonel Moore-Harbert does not remember.

5 Finally, some of the deponents are expected to confirm that several members of the 6 unit complained to higher ranking officers that the female commander of the 446th was 7 having an inappropriate relationship with a married male officer serving under her 8 command.<sup>18</sup> Neither of these straight officers was discharged, even though their relationship 9 actually caused servicemembers to make complaints up the chain of command.<sup>19</sup> Since the 10 Government relies on the unit climate surveys as probative evidence to gauge the morale of 11 the 446th AES at select points in time, testimony from these deponents is relevant to rebut 12 this reliance. The Government contends that commanders looked to the survey results to 13 assess morale, thus Witt should be given the opportunity to paint the context in which the 14 surveys were taken. This involves consideration of unit relationships that actually did have a 15 negative effect on unit morale and cohesion.

16 In sum, the scheduled deponents will provide evidence Colonels Walker and Moore-17 Harbert cannot because either they do not know it or cannot recall.<sup>20</sup>

18 III. ARGUMENT

19 A. Cases Holding That Damages Actions Cannot Be Brought Against the Military or 20 Its Officers Are Not Relevant Since Plaintiff's Suit Does Not Seek Money Damages.

1 whether they be based on statutes, such as the Federal Tort Claims Act (“FTCA”),<sup>21</sup> or the 2 Civil Rights Act of 1964,<sup>22</sup> or the Constitution,<sup>23</sup> may not be brought. But none of these 3 cases are on point. Plaintiff Witt has not sued for money damages. She seeks only 4 injunctive and declaratory relief to remedy a constitutional injury. See Wilkins v. United 5 States, 279 F.3d 782, 790 (9th Cir. 2002) (“we reverse the dismissal of the remaining claims 6 for injunctive and declaratory relief” brought by servicemember making constitutional 7 challenge to chaplaincy program).

8 Indeed, one of the cases the Government cites, expressly distinguished the situation 9 where the plaintiff is not seeking damages but is seeking injunctive relief for an alleged 10 constitutional wrong. In Jackson v. Brigle, 17 F.3d at 284 the Court expressly noted that 11 the case before it was not comparable to either Pruitt v. Cheney, 963 F.2d 1160 (9th Cir.
12 1991), as amended (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1020 (1992) or High Tech Gays v. Def.
13 Indus. Sec. Clearance Office, 895 F.2d 563 (9th Cir. 1990). In Jackson, the plaintiff was 14 seeking money damages either under the FTCA or pursuant to a Bivens action. In Pruitt 15 a lesbian military officer sought (and obtained) injunctive relief for violation of her 16 constitutional rights against the Secretary of Defense and the Army. In High Tech Gays, 17 the plaintiffs, gay and lesbian civilian employees of the government sought injunctive

19 <sup>21</sup> United States v. Ferres, 340 U.S. 135, 146 (1950) (Congress did not authorize servicemembers to bring claims 20 under the Federal Tort Claims Act (“FTCA”) against the military for injuries which are service-connected); 21 United States v. Johnson, 481 U.S. 681, 689-91 (1987)(same); United States v. Shearer, 473 U.S. 52, 57 (1985)(same, rejecting suits for negligence causing off base injuries); Jackson v. Brigle, 17 F.3d 280 (9th Cir.
22 1994)(rejecting suit under FTCA because injuries were service-connected).

23 <sup>22</sup> The Government cites to Hodge v. Dalton, 107 F.3d 705 (9th Cir. 1997); Mier v. Owens, 57 F.3d 747 (9th Cir.
24 1995); and Gonzalez v. Dep’t of the Army, 718 F.2d 926 (9th Cir. 1983). But these cases simply hold that the 25 military is immune from suit for damages under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 because Congress did not 26 waive the Government’s sovereign immunity when it enacted the statute.

<sup>23</sup> Chappell v. Wallace, 462 U.S. 296, 305 (1983): “We hold that enlisted military personnel may not maintain a suit to recover damages from a superior officer for alleged constitutional violations.” (Bold italics added). At the same time it rejected the contention that a constitutionally-based Bivens-type damages action should be permitted, the Court also emphasized that suits for other types of relief from constitutional wrongs remained proper: “This Court has never held, nor do we now hold, that military personnel are barred from all redress in civilian courts for constitutional wrongs suffered in the course of military service.” Id.

1 relief from the denial of security clearances on constitutional grounds. As the Jackson 2 court noted:

3 Neither of these cases involved claims for damages under the FTCA or Bivens
4 and neither had anything whatsoever to do with Feres immunity.

5 Jackson, 17 F.3d at 284. Neither does this case.

6 The Government misrepresents the law when it suggests that all suits against the 7 military for violation of constitutional rights are barred by a general doctrine of judicial 8 deference to the military. The Government cites to Zaputil v. Cowgill, 335 F.3d 885, 886-87 9 (9th Cir. 2003) for the proposition that “[t]he Ninth Circuit has also barred constitutional 10 claims brought by a service member,” and notes that Zaputil involved due process and 11 involuntary service claims. But the Government ignores the fact that Zaputil involved a 12 claim for money damages, and the holding was that this claim was barred by the Feres 13 doctrine:

14 The Feres doctrine prevents Zaputil from recovering civil damages for any injuries caused by the military decisions about which she complains.

15 Zaputil, 335 F.3d at 889 (bold italics added). Thus, it is disingenuous for the Government to 16 claim that Zaputil stands for the proposition that all suits raising constitutional claims 17 against the military are barred. Suits for money are barred and that is all.

18 B. The Ninth Circuit Has Long Held That Suits Brought By Gay and Lesbian 19 Servicemembers Against the Military Raising Claims of Constitutional Injury And 20 Seeking Injunctive or Declaratory Relief are Not Barred and That Servicemembers
Must Be Allowed to Develop the Record In Support of their Claims.

21 The Government relies on cases which held that certain claims brought against the 22 military -- quite unlike the claims brought here -- are simply not reviewable because judicial 23 deference to the military precludes the litigation of such claims. But it has long been 24 established in this Circuit that claims that the military has violated the constitutional rights of 1 gay and lesbian servicemembers are reviewable.<sup>24</sup>

2 The Ninth Circuit has consistently rejected the contention that “deference to the military” 3 prohibits litigation of such claims:

4 The Ninth Circuit has consistently entertained servicemembers' constitutional 5 challenges to military policies on the merits. We have adopted, and frequently 6 reaffirmed, the test of Mindes v. Seaman, 453 F.2d 197, 201-02 (5th Cir.
7 1971), to determine whether we may consider a constitutional challenge to a 8 particular military decision. [Citation and footnote omitted]. For example, in 9 Pruitt v. Cheney, 963 F.2d 1160, 1166 (9th Cir. 1991)(as amended), we 10 rejected the Army's argument that deference to the military should bar an 11 equal protection challenge to a servicemember's discharge. Such deference was “best applied in the process of judging whether the reasons put forth on the record for the Army's discrimination against Pruitt are rationally related to any of the Army's permissible goals.” Id. Similarly, in Phillips v. Perry, 106 F.3d 1420, 1421, 1425-26 (9th Cir. 1997), we considered on the merits (and rejected) equal protection and First Amendment challenges to the military's “Don't Ask/Don't Tell” policy, [footnote omitted] noting that we have repeatedly considered such challenges.

12 Wilkins, 279 F.3d at 788.

13 In Pruitt the Army urged the Court to affirm the dismissal of a lesbian Army officer's 14 constitutional claim on the grounds that the military policy of excluding gays and lesbians was 15 rational. The Army made this argument even though the plaintiff had not had any opportunity to 16 develop the record to support her constitutional claim. The Ninth Circuit rejected this 17 suggestion, holding that if it deferred to the military judgment “in the absence of any supporting 18 factual record, we would come close to denying reviewability at all.” Pruitt, 963 F.2d at 1166-19 67. The Pruitt court noted that for decades, dating back to then Judge Kennedy's opinion in 20 Beller v. Middendorf, 632 F.2d 788 (9th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 905 (1981), the Ninth 21 Circuit had reviewed constitutional challenges to military personnel actions taken against gay 22 and lesbian servicemembers after permitting the servicemembers to develop the record. In Pruitt
23

24 <sup>24</sup> This Circuit applies the Mindes test under which a servicemember must meet two threshold requirements in 25 order to obtain judicial review of a military decision: he must allege “(a) a violation of a recognized 26 constitutional right . . . and (b) exhaustion of available intraservice remedies.” Khalsa v. Weinberger, 779 F.2d 1393, 1398 (9th Cir.), reaffirmed, 787 F.2d 1288 (1985).

1 the Court noted: “The Army does not ask us to deny review; it asks us to uphold a regulation 2 without a record to support its rational basis. This we decline to do.” Pruitt, 963 F.2d at 1167.

3 Assuming that Pruitt supports her allegations with evidence, we will not spare 4 the Army the task, which those cases imposed, of offering a rational basis for 5 its regulation, nor will we deprive Pruitt of the opportunity to contest that basis.

6 Pruitt, 963 F.2d at 1166 (bold italics added).

7 The Government makes the same type of request in this case which it made in Pruitt, but 8 instead of trying to preclude the making of a record by asking the Circuit Court to affirm without 9 remanding the case, it asks this Court to preclude the making of a record by prohibiting the 10 plaintiff from conducting discovery after the case has been remanded. The Government’s 11 request would render nugatory the Ninth Circuit’s decision reversing the dismissal of Witt’s 12 case, and would flatly contradict Circuit and District precedent such as Pruitt and Cammermeyer 13 v. Aspin, 850 F.Supp. 910, 915-916 (W.D.Wash. 1994), dismissed as moot sub nom. and 14 refusing to vacate district court opinion, Cammermeyer v. Perry, 97 F.3d 1235 (9th Cir. 1996).

15 C. Defendants Have Not Shown Good Cause for Issuance of a Protective Order.
16 None of the People to Be Deposed Claim They Will be Burdened By Giving testimony. On the Contrary, Several Have Indicated Their Desire to Be Deposed.

17 A party seeking a protective order under Rule 26(c) “bears the burden of showing 18 that specific prejudice or harm will result if no protective order is granted.” Stormans, Inc. v.
19 Selecky, 251 F.R.D. 573, 576 (W.D. Wash. 2008) (citing Beckman Indus. v. Int’l Ins. Co., 20 966 F.2d 470, 476 (9th Cir. 1992)). The Government cites three cases in support of its 21 request that the Court prohibit Witt from deposing members of the 446th AES. Two of 22 these cases have nothing to do with requests to prohibit a party from taking a deposition and 23 the third in dicta strongly suggests that such an order would be improper.

24 San Jose Mercury News v. U.S. District Court, 187 F.3d 1096 (9th Cir. 1999)
25 involved the question of whether the trial court should have permitted a nonparty newspaper

1 to intervene in a case so that it could gain access to a document that had already been 2 produced in discovery by the defendant.<sup>25</sup> This Court is quite familiar with the second 3 case, Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, since it is its own decision. Stormans did not involve an 4 attempt to preclude the opposing party from conducting discovery. Although the plaintiffs 5 initially objected to providing certain information about their employers' identities in their 6 answers to interrogatories, they agreed to answer the interrogatories and merely requested 7 that their answers be protected against disclosure to the public. Finding that the plaintiffs 8 had "substantiate[d] their argument with a specific example" of harm that could result if the 9 names of their employers were disclosed, this Court issued a protective order prohibiting 10 disclosure of this limited class of information to the public. Id. at 576. Thus, no discovery 11 was prohibited in either Stormans or Mercury News, and neither opinion involved any issue 12 about whether to allow depositions.

13 The Government purports to rely on In re Subpoena Issued to Dennis Friedman, 350 14 F.3d 65, 70 (2d Cir. 2003) for the proposition that "a court may prevent a proposed 15 deposition" if it would create an inappropriate burden. There the plaintiff sought to depose 16 opposing counsel and the district court temporarily prohibited that, stating that the plaintiff 17 first had to use the discovery device of written interrogatories to see if that mechanism of 18 discovery would suffice. In dicta the opinion, written by then Judge Sotomayor, strongly 19 suggested that the district court had erred. But she concluded "we need not rule definitively 20 on that matter because we have recently been advised that [attorney] Friedman has 21 consented to the deposition, thereby rendering this appeal moot." Id. at 67.

22 Relying on Supreme Court precedent, Judge Sotomayor noted that the rules allowing 24 <sup>25</sup> The Circuit Court granted the newspaper's petition for a writ of mandamus and ordered the district court to 25 allow the paper to challenge the previously entered protective order – which the parties had stipulated to – which 26 denied public access to the document. The Court held the paper was entitled to challenge the stipulated determination that there was "good cause" to keep the document secret. 187 F.3d at 1103.

1 parties to take depositions were very liberal:

2 The deposition-discovery regime set out by the Federal Rules of Civil 3 Procedure is an extremely permissive one to which courts have long 4 “accorded a broad and liberal treatment to effectuate their purpose that civil 5 trials in the federal court [need not] be carried out in the dark.

6 Id. at 69, quoting Schlagenhof v. Holder, 379 U.S. 104, 114-115 (1964). “Moreover, the 7 rules generally do not place any initial burden on parties to justify their deposition and 8 discovery requests.” Id.

9 In the present case, plaintiff does not seek to take the deposition of opposing counsel 10 and there is no contention that plaintiff seeks to discover any privileged information.
11 Accordingly, In re Subpoena is of little relevance, and to the extent that it is relevant, it 12 supports the plaintiff’s position that she is entitled to depose unit members because they 13 have knowledge of facts directly relevant to the question of whether it would harm unit 14 morale, cohesion or discipline to have known gays and lesbians serving in the 446th.

15 IV. CONCLUSION

16 The defendants have no right to selectively choose which members of the 446th the 17 plaintiff is to be permitted to depose. Granting the defendants’ motion would be contrary to 18 the Circuit Court’s decision in this case, to prior Circuit precedent such as Pruitt, to Rule 19 26(c), and would simply assist the defendants in preventing the plaintiff from accumulating 20 evidence that her reinstatement would not negatively impact unit morale or cohesion.
21 Plaintiff asks this Court to deny the motion.
