shall proceed no further therein, but another judge shall be assigned to hear such proceeding. The affidavit shall state the facts and the reasons for the belief that bias or prejudice exists.

A judge must recuse himself if a reasonable person would believe that he is unable to be impartial. Yagman v. Republic Insurance, 987 F.2d 622, 626 (9th Cir. 1993). This is an objective inquiry regarding whether there is an appearance of bias, not whether there is bias in fact. Preston v. United States, 923 F.2d 731, 734 (9th Cir. 1992); United States v. Conforte, 624 F.2d 869, 881 (9th Cir. 1980); See also In Liteky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540 (1994) (explaining the narrow bases for recusal). A litigant cannot, however, use the recusal process to remove a judge based on adverse rulings in the pending case: the alleged bias must result from an extrajudicial source. United States v. Studley, 783 F.2d 934, 939 (9th Cir. 1986).

The only evidence of bias presented by plaintiff is the fact that two of his prior litigations were dismissed or transferred by Judge Bryan.¹ Other than a vague assertion that dismissal/transfer of a cause of action prior to discovery is somehow improper, plaintiff does not attempt to show that the prior decisions were legally or factually incorrect. Nor does plaintiff identify any extrajudicial source of the alleged prejudice: the only evidence of bias presented is Judge Bryan's earlier decisions. Judicial decisions made during the course of litigation are rarely an adequate basis for a motion to recuse, however. The losing party often disagrees with the judge's ruling, but cannot use the recusal process for a strategic purpose or to "judge shop." See Ex Parte American Steel Barrel Co. and Seaman, 230 U.S. 35, 44 (1913).² Although an adverse decision may, in limited circumstances, give rise to an inference of bias if it is so arbitrary that the motives of the judicial officer could rightly be questioned, there is no basis for such an inference here.

¹ In at least one of these prior litigations, C04-5669RJB, plaintiff sought recusal of Judge Bryan based on an adverse decision on defendants' motion to dismiss. That motion was denied.

² Objections to an adverse decision must be raised through an appeal, not a motion to recuse. ORDER -2-

Because a judge's conduct in the context of judicial proceedings does not constitute the requisite bias under 28 U.S.C. § 144 or § 455 if it is prompted solely by information that the judge received in the context of the performance of her duties as the presiding judicial officer, plaintiff has not met his burden of showing an appearance of bias. Having reviewed plaintiff's motion and the remainder of the record, the Court finds that Judge Bryan's impartiality cannot reasonably be questioned despite the fact that he dismissed or transferred plaintiff's prior complaints. There being no evidence of bias or prejudice, plaintiff's request to remove Judge Bryan from this matter is DENIED.
