6	UNITED STATES D	ISTRICT COURT
7	WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT TACOMA
8	AMEDEO NAPPI,
9	Plaintiff,	CASE NO. C14-5945 JRC
10	V.	ORDER ON DEFENDANT'S
11		MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
12	TIMBERLINE REGIONAL LIBRARY,
13	Defendant.
15	Plaintiff, a public library patron, was "trespassed" from the library for allegedly
16	inappropriate behavior. Although plaintiff has a limited constitutional due process interest in
17	maintaining his access to a public library, the libra	ry provided him an opportunity to contest the
18	trespass order and he never took that opportunity.	Instead, he filed this lawsuit claiming that his
10	due process rights were violated. Under these circ	umstances, his claim that defendant violated his due process rights fails.
20	Factual Su	mmary
21	Defendant Timberline Regional Library ("	FRL") is a regional library pursuant to RCW
22	27.12.010(4), and is a public entity created by law pursuant to RCW 27.04, which operates and
23	administers libraries in five counties in the State of Washington, including Thurston County, for use by the public and is funded by taxation (Dkt. 1, Ex. 1, ¶ 3, Dkt. 3, ¶ 3). TRL operates under the supervision of a board of trustees and bylaws (Dkt. 16-1). Plaintiff, Amedeo Nappi, is a resident of Olympia, who frequented the library (id.).

On or about November 13, 2012, a female librarian at the Olympia library ("library") asked plaintiff if he preferred an upright computer or a recessed one and plaintiff reportedly responded that he liked girls lying down, but that either computer would do (Dkt. 21, Exhibit 1).
The librarian reported the comment and library staff asked plaintiff to come to the library office to discuss the matter (Dkt. 20, ¶¶ 2-3, Dkt. 18, ¶ 1). Plaintiff refused and left the library in a disruptive manner (Dkt. 20, ¶¶ 4-5, Dkt. 18, ¶ 2).

10 Three days later, on November 16, 2012, plaintiff returned to the library and was again 11 asked to meet with library staff to discuss the incident. He again refused and became disruptive. 12 The Olympia Police were called in response (Dkt. 18, ¶¶ 3-5, Dkt. 15, ¶1). When the police 13 arrived, they spoke to plaintiff and advised him that he had been "trespassed" – meaning that he 14 was barred from the premises. Plaintiff left without being arrested (Dkt. 18, ¶¶ 3-5, Dkt. 15, ¶1). 15 Defendant's acting director, Gwen Culp, sent plaintiff a letter of trespass after the November 16 incident advising plaintiff that he was prohibited from coming onto the premises for six months 16 17 and invited him to challenge the decision (Dkt. 16, Ex. 4). Plaintiff admits that in December of 18 2012, defendant had offered him a telephone hearing to contest the acting director's decision to 19 trespass but that he refused to participate in such a hearing (Dkt. 24, p. 2, 3). Instead, plaintiff 20 demanded copies of defendant's policies and procedures and other documents and served 21 defendant with a summons and complaint (id.). 22 //

1	Procedural History
2	On or about November 10, 2014, plaintiff filed a pro se action in Thurston County
3	Superior Court (Dkt. 1, Ex. 1). Although not specifically stated, plaintiff appears to be making a
4	claim for violation of his constitutional rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (id.). Plaintiff alleges that
5	he was denied procedural due process under the United States Constitution (Dkt. 1, Ex. 1, ¶17).
6	Defendant removed the case from Thurston County Superior Court to federal court on
7	December 2, 2014 (Dkt. 1). The parties filed a consent to proceed before a magistrate judge on
8	January 29, 2015 (Dkt. 10), giving this Court authority to decide the case.
9	On April 14, 2015, defendant filed a motion for summary judgment (Dkt. 14), together
10	with supporting declarations (see Dkts. 15 - 22). Plaintiff filed a response (Dkt. 24) and 11	declarations (Dkts. 25, 26). Defendant filed a reply (Dkt. 27). The Court has reviewed all of
12	said materials.

United States. Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 535 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327 (1986). Section 1983 is the appropriate avenue to remedy an alleged wrong only if both of these elements are present. Haygood v. Younger, 769 F.2d 1350, 1354 (9th Cir. 1985). Initially, if plaintiff moves for summary judgment, plaintiff has the burden of presenting admissible evidence to support each of these elements. See Lujan v. Wildlife Fed., 497 U.S. 871, 888-89 (1990).

Analysis

The Supreme Court has repeatedly held that municipalities and other bodies of local government are "persons" within the meaning of this statute. See, e.g., City of St. Louis. v. Praprotnik, 485 U.S. 112, 121, (1988); Monell v. New York City Dept. of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 690 (1978). Also, the Supreme Court has regularly noted that other governmental entities that derive revenues from taxation, are considered "municipalities" for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. See, e.g., Monell, supra, at 689; Board of County Commissioners of Bryan County v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 402 (1997).

15 To establish municipal liability under § 1983, a plaintiff must show (1) deprivation of a 16 constitutional right; (2) that the municipality has a policy; (3) the policy amounts to deliberate 17 indifference to plaintiff's constitutional rights; and (4) the policy is the moving force behind the constitutional violation. See Oviatt v. Pearce, 954 F.2d 1470, 1474 (9th Cir. 1992). If there is 18 19 no express policy, then plaintiff must prove that there is a widespread practice that is so 20 permanent and well settled that it constitutes a custom or usage with the force of law or that the 21 constitutional injury was caused by a person with final policymaking authority. See City of St. 22 Louis v. Paprotinik, 485 U.S. 112, 121 (1988).

Plaintiff has submitted sufficient evidence to survive summary judgment to prove that defendant is a "person" acting under color of state law for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983.
 Plaintiff has only named TRL as a defendant and defendant impliedly concedes that TRL is a "person" acting under color of state law for purposes of showing a §1983 violation (Dkt. 8, ¶ 3; Dkt. 14, page 6). Nevertheless, plaintiff has failed to present admissible evidence as to the second requirement – that defendant violated plaintiff's constitutional rights.

Plaintiff's only argument is that he was denied due process. The due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. In analyzing a procedural due process claim, a court must first determine whether the claimant has been deprived of a liberty or property interest protected by the Constitution; if so, the court must determine whether the procedures attendant upon that deprivation were constitutionally sufficient. Kentucky Dep't of Corrections v. Thompson, 490 U.S. 454 (1989).

Arguably, the suspension of library privileges involves a cognizable liberty interest. See Wayfield v. Town of Tisbury, 925 F. Supp. 880, 885 (D. Mass. 1996); Doyle v. Clark County Public Library, 2007 WL 2407051, at *5 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 20, 2007). But see Grigsby v. City of Oakland, 2002 WL 1298759, at *3 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2002). Since plaintiff was denied access to the public library, he was deprived of this arguable liberty interest. But plaintiff fails to submit proof that the procedures attendant upon that deprivation was constitutionally insufficient.

"Due process is flexible and calls for such procedural protections as the particular situation demands." Armstrong v. Meyers, 964 F.2d 948, 950 (9th Cir. 1992) (citing Matthews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 334 (1976). Here, the library advised plaintiff of the reason he was trespassed both orally and in writing. On several occasions, by his own admission, the library offered plaintiff an opportunity to explain his side of the situation. Instead, in each of these instances, he refused.

4 A library's primary purpose is to provide a platform for the public to gain knowledge 5 through reading, writing and quiet contemplation. See Crimer v. Bureau of Police for the Town of Morristown, 958 F.2d 1242, 1261 (3rd Cir. 1992). Disruptive behavior, such as the behavior 6 7 reportedly engaged in by plaintiff, defeats that purpose. State law allows a library board of trustees to exclude any person who willfully and persistently engages in dangerous or offensive 8 9 conduct from the use of the library. See RCW 27.12.290. Under TRL's bylaws, the executive 10 director has discretion to limit access to the facilities to a person who engages in such conduct 11 (see Dkt. 16, Ex. 2, p.1). The acting director exercised that authority and allowed plaintiff the 12 opportunity to appeal her decision. Such due process is sufficient under these circumstances. 13 Therefore, defendant's motion for summary judgment is GRANTED.

All other issues regarding access to public documents are, at best, state law claims, for which this Court chooses not to exercise jurisdiction. See Carnegie-Mellon University v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 349-51 (1988); 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

Plaintiff's claims against defendant are DISMISSED with prejudice. The Clerk is directed to mail a copy of this Order to pro se plaintiff at his last known address and close the case.

Dated this 26th day of June, 2015.
