

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF WEST VIRGINIA

BECKLEY DIVISION

DENNIS A. CHASE,

Petitioner,

v.

CIVIL ACTION NO. 5:10-cv-00352

DAVID BERKEBILE,

Respondent.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

The Court has reviewed Petitioner's Petition For Writ of Habeas Corpus by a Person in Federal Custody Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241 [Docket 1] and Appendix [Docket 2]. By Standing Order [Docket 4] entered on March 18, 2010, this action was referred to the Honorable R. Clarke VanDervort, United States Magistrate Judge, for submission to this Court of proposed findings of fact and recommendation for disposition, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636.

On May 14, 2010, the Magistrate Judge submitted Proposed Findings and Recommendation ("PF & R") [Docket 6]. He recommends that the Court find that Petitioner's Petition is not ripe for adjudication and that he has not exhausted his administrative remedies prior to seeking review under Section 2241. He further recommends that the Court dismiss Petitioner's Application for Writ of Habeas Corpus without prejudice. On June 29, 2010, Petitioner filed his response to the PF & R [Docket 9].

I.

Petitioner pled guilty to Conspiracy to Unlawfully Transfer a Machine Gun in violation of 26 U.S.C. § 5861(e) and 18 U.S.C. § 371 in the United States Court for the District of Maine on November 24, 2008. United States v. Chase, Crim. No. 1:07-cr-00083 (D.M. Dec. 22, 2008). On December 22, 2008, he was sentenced to fifty-seven (57) months of imprisonment followed by three (3) years of supervised release. Id. He is currently serving his sentence at FCI Beckley in Beaver, West Virginia. His projected release date is February 9, 2013. He filed his Section 2241 Petition on March 18, 2010, challenging the Bureau of Prison's policies relating to the placement of inmates in residential re-entry centers.

II.

This Court “shall make a de novo determination of those portions of the report or specified proposed findings or recommendations to which objection is made.” 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C). However, the Court is not required to review, under a de novo or any other standard, the factual or legal conclusions of the magistrate judge as to those portions of the findings or recommendation to which no objections are addressed. Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 150 (1985). In addition, this Court need not conduct a de novo review when a party “makes general and conclusory objections that do not direct the Court to a specific error in the magistrate's proposed findings and recommendations.” Orpiano v. Johnson, 687 F.2d 44, 47 (4th Cir.1982). When reviewing portions of the PF & R de novo, the Court will consider the fact that Petitioner is acting pro se, and his pleadings will be accorded liberal construction. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 106 (1976); Loe v. Armistead, 582 F.2d 1291, 1295 (4th Cir.1978).

III.

Petitioner's claims are the subject of several habeas petitions filed in the past two years. Petitioner alleges that the Bureau of Prisons ("BOP") has promulgated policies and regulations that categorically deny inmates placement into residential re-entry centers ("RRC") longer than six (6) months, despite Congressional intent that the limit be extended to twelve (12) months. He asserts that these policies violate 18 U.S.C. §§ 3621(b), 3624(c), and the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"). At the core of Petitioner's claim are BOP policies implementing the federal statutes granting the BOP discretion in placing inmates and allowing the pre-release of prisoners to serve the final portion of their sentence in some sort of community re-entry program, referred to in this opinion as an RRC. The statute providing for the placement of inmates, 18 U.S.C. § 3621, provides as follows:

The Bureau of Prisons shall designate the place of the prisoner's imprisonment. The Bureau may designate any available penal or correctional facility that meets minimum standards of health and habitability established by the Bureau, whether maintained by the Federal Government or otherwise and whether within or without the judicial district in which the person was convicted, that the Bureau determines to be appropriate and suitable, considering--

- (1) the resources of the facility contemplated;
- (2) the nature and circumstances of the offense;
- (3) the history and characteristics of the prisoner;
- (4) any statement by the court that imposed the sentence--
 - (A) concerning the purposes for which the sentence to imprisonment was determined to be warranted; or
 - (B) recommending a type of penal or correctional facility as appropriate; and
- (5) any pertinent policy statement issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(2) of title 28.

In designating the place of imprisonment or making transfers under this subsection, there shall be no favoritism given to prisoners of high social or economic status. The Bureau may at any time, having regard for the same matters, direct the transfer of a prisoner from one penal or correctional facility to another. The Bureau shall make available appropriate substance abuse treatment for each prisoner the Bureau determines has a treatable condition of substance addiction or abuse. Any order, recommendation, or request by a sentencing court that a convicted person serve a term of imprisonment in a community corrections facility shall have no binding effect on the authority of the Bureau under this section to determine or change the place of imprisonment of that person.

28 U.S.C. § 3621(b). This statute grants the BOP authority to designate an inmate's placement in an appropriate facility, including an RRC. The BOP must consider the five factors set forth in the statute in making that designation, but it is not restricted as to when, during an inmate's sentence, it makes a designation.

The second statute at issue, 18 U.S.C. § 3624, obligates the BOP to consider an inmate's RRC eligibility toward the end of his sentence and limits the portion of an inmate's sentence that he may spend in an RRC. In 2007, § 3624 was amended by the Second Chance Act to extend from six months to twelve months the portion of the sentence that may be served in such a program. Section 3624 now provides:

The Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall, to the extent practicable, ensure that a prisoner serving a term of imprisonment spends a portion of the final months of that term (not to exceed 12 months), under conditions that will afford that prisoner a reasonable opportunity to adjust to and prepare for the reentry of that prisoner into the community. Such conditions may include a community correctional facility.

18 U.S.C. § 3624(c)(1). The placement of an inmate in an RRC during the final portion of his sentence is sometimes referred to as "pre-release RRC placement," as opposed to the placement of an inmate in an RRC at any other point during his sentence pursuant to § 3621(b), which can be distinguished as "anytime RRC placement."

Petitioner complains that the BOP has yet to grant an FCI Beckley prisoner placement at an RRC for longer than the final six months of his sentence and has implemented policies to prevent any inmate from being considered for RRC placement for longer than six months. He asserts BOP-issued memoranda and program statements essentially foreclose any possibility of RRC placement for longer than six months. Specifically, he points to two memoranda addressed to “Chief Executive Officers” from the Assistant Director of Correctional Programs Division and the Assistant Director/General Counsel dated April 14, 2008, and November 14, 2008.

The April 14, 2008, memorandum describes the impact of the Second Chance Act on the statutory authority for pre-release placement. It informs BOP staff that the pre-release time frame increased from six months to a maximum of twelve months, and the pre-release placement decisions are now required to be made on an individual basis. (Apr. 14, 2008, Mem. 2.) The memorandum explains that staff must make those decisions earlier, seventeen to nineteen months before an inmate’s projected release date to account for the increase in maximum placement time. (Apr. 14, 2008, Mem. 3.) The memorandum goes on to require staff to use the five factors in § 3621(b) in considering pre-release placement. It advises staff that inmates may not be automatically precluded from pre-release placement and an inmate’s “pre-release RRC decision must be analyzed and supported under the five-factor criteria.” (Apr. 14, 2008, Mem. 4.) The paragraph in the memorandum relating to Petitioner’s claims is paragraph III(D) on page four. It provides:

While the [Second Chance] Act makes inmates eligible for a maximum of 12 months pre-release RRC placements, Bureau experience reflects inmates’ pre-release RRC needs can usually be accommodated by a placement of six months or less. Should staff determine an inmate’s pre-release placement may require greater than six months, the Warden must obtain the Regional Director’s written concurrence before submitting the placement to the Community Corrections Manager.

(Apr. 14, 2008, Mem. 4.)

The November 14, 2008, memorandum addresses placement of inmates into RRCs when more than twelve months remain from their projected release date, or anytime RRC placement. That memorandum also requires staff to make individualized decisions on an inmate's request for transfer to an RRC during their sentence. (Nov. 14, 2008, Mem. 1.) It provides that "An RRC placement beyond six months should only occur when there are unusual or extraordinary circumstances justifying such placement, and the Regional Director concurs." (Nov. 14, 2008, Mem. 3.)

Petitioner contends that the promulgation of these BOP policies categorically denies inmates the opportunity to spend more than six months in an RRC, in violation of the Congressional intent behind the increase to a maximum of twelve months contained in 18 U.S.C. §§ 3621(b) and 3624(c). However, Petitioner fails to assert in his Amended Petition how these policies have injured him -- one defect among several that the Court will discuss below.

The problem Petitioner, and others in his position, encounter with respect to § 3624(c) is that the BOP may consider a prisoner's eligibility for pre-release RCC placement under that statute seventeen to nineteen months prior to his projected release date. Thus, the earliest Petitioner will know whether the BOP will place him in an RCC at all, let alone for no more than six months, is July 9, 2011, nineteen months before his release date. This presents issues of ripeness and exhaustion because, insofar as Petitioner objects to a speculative denial of RCC placement longer than six months, his claim is premature. Additionally, prisoners are required to exhaust administrative remedies prior to seeking habeas relief and it is unclear what remedies Petitioner has pursued, if any, and what remedies are available to him for his claims relating to the future application of BOP policies to his sentence.

These problems were addressed by the magistrate judge in his PF&R. He found that inasmuch as Petitioner's eligibility for RRC placement would not occur for at least another three years, his claim for RRC placement is premature. Judge VanDervort further found that prisoners filing petitions pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241 are required to exhaust their administrative remedies prior to seeking habeas relief, and in this case Petitioner is unable to exhaust those remedies before his claims are ripe. Based on these findings the magistrate judge recommends this Court dismiss the petition.

IV.

Petitioner responded to the PF&R on June 29, 2010, objecting to the findings with respect to ripeness and exhaustion of remedies. First addressing ripeness, Petitioner asserts that "overwhelming evidence exists that shows Petitioner will be denied more than six months RRC placement when he is finally assessed for such placement." (Resp. 5.) He refers to the evidence that BOP policies preclude RRC placements beyond six months, and that no prisoner at FCI or FCP Beckley, or in the BOP's Mid-Atlantic Region as well as several other regions, have received a placement for longer than six months. (Resp. 5.) He alleges that the policies and practices of the BOP not to place inmates for longer than six months amount to imminent future harm. As to exhaustion of remedies, Petitioner alleges that exhaustion is not required in his case because the remedy process is not designed to resolve systemic challenges and for that reason exhaustion would be futile. (Resp. 16-17.)

V.

To demonstrate that he is entitled to habeas corpus relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, Petitioner must establish that he is “in custody in violation of the Constitution or law or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3). The BOP is not required to place an inmate in an RRC for any amount of time. See Woodall v. Federal Bureau of Prisons, 432 F.3d 235, 251 (3d Cir.2005) (“[T]hat the BOP may assign a prisoner to a [RCC] [for 12 months] does not mean that it must”). Where the BOP fulfills its statutory requirements in determining Petitioner’s eligibility for RRC placement, he has not established a violation. Petitioner has no protected liberty interest in an RRC placement. The BOP’s policies in making an individualized determination of whether an inmate is eligible for any amount of RRC placement are reasonable and “facially consistent with [18 U.S.C. §3624].” Sacora v. Thomas, 628 F.3d 1059, 1066 (9th Cir. 2010).

Moreover, in a similar case to Petitioner’s, the Court ordered a limited response from the BOP to the petitioner’s claims. Delfino v. Berkebile, Civ. No. 10-cv-00432 (Aug. 1, 2011). Respondent asserted that a June 24, 2010 BOP memorandum replaced the earlier two and this newer memorandum provided guidance on all subsequent RRC determinations. The new memorandum provides that Regional Director approval is no longer required for RRC placements for longer than six months. Delfino, Docket 20 at 11. It appears from this memorandum that Petitioner’s concerns regarding BOP policy have been addressed. Accordingly, Petitioner’s claims are without merit.

VI.

For the reasons stated above, the Court ORDERS that the Magistrate Judge’s Proposed Findings and Recommendation be ADOPTED to the extent he recommends dismissal of Petitioner’s habeas claims and that the Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241 [Docket 1] be DISMISSED.

The Court DIRECTS the Clerk to send a copy of this Order to counsel of record and any unrepresented party.
