

STATE OF MICHIGAN
COURT OF APPEALS

ADAMO DEMOLITION COMPANY,

Petitioner-Appellee,

FOR PUBLICATION
December 10, 2013
9:00 a.m.

v

DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY,

Respondent-Appellant.

No. 312667
Tax Tribunal
LC No. 00-427308

Before: WHITBECK, P.J., and WILDER and RONAYNE KRAUSE, JJ.

PER CURIAM.

Respondent, Department of Treasury (the Department), appeals as of right the Tax Tribunal’s decision that the Department incorrectly attributed compensation that Mancorp Inc. and E-Connect, Inc. (the service providers) paid to the employees of petitioner, Adamo Demolition Company (Adamo Demolition) during tax years 2005, 2006, and 2007. The Department attributed this compensation on the basis that the service providers were professional employer organizations under MCL 208.4(4).¹ We affirm the Tribunal’s decision regarding the service providers’ status as professional employer organizations. But we reverse the Tribunal’s finding that the Department’s legal position was frivolous and its related award of costs to Adamo Demolition, and we remand on this issue.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The parties stipulated to the facts in this case. Richard Adamo is Adamo Demolition’s sole owner, sole director, and president. Adamo Demolition entered into professional employer organization agreements with Mancorp in 2005 and with E-Connect in 2006 and 2007, outsourcing its human resource operations to them. Pursuant to these agreements, Adamo Demolition’s employees became the service providers’ employees, which they then leased back to Adamo Demolition. Adamo provided management and administrative services to Adamo Demolition. The service providers paid all the employees’ salaries, including Adamo’s salary, and withheld federal income taxes from those salaries.

¹ Repealed by 2006 PA 325.

Pursuant to the service providers' agreements, Mancorp retained the rights to (1) "exercise direction and control" over the employees' daily activities or delegate that right to Adamo Demolition, and (2) "hire, promote, reassign, discipline and terminate" employees. Adamo Demolition's agreement with E-Connect provided that E-Connect retained the right to hire employees and make decisions concerning "all employment and unemployment decisions," and that Adamo Demolition agreed to utilize E-Connect's policies and procedures regarding those decisions. It also provided that "the Parties shall share the responsibilities of being the employer of the Covered Employees," and that E-Connect assigns and delegates to [Adamo Demolition], the responsibility for day to day supervision and control of the Co-Employees. [E-Connect] does not and shall not have any liability, obligation or responsibility therefore whatsoever.

Following an audit, the Department adjusted Adamo Demolition's single business tax base to include the compensation that the service providers paid the employees, resulting in an increased assessment of $72,362, with interest. Adamo Demolition appealed to the Tribunal.

In its written opinion, the Tribunal relied on the legislative history of MCL 208.4(4) and this Court's decision in Herald Wholesale, Inc v Dep't of Treasury.² The Tribunal concluded that the disclaimer in Adamo Demolition's contract with E-Connect did not invalidate its status as a professional employer organization. The Tribunal noted that MCL 208.4(4)(a) expressly permitted a professional employer organization to share responsibility regarding the direction and control of employees' work. The Tribunal also found that Adamo's status as Adamo Demolition's sole shareholder, director, and president did not distinguish this case from Herald Wholesale.

Thus, the Tribunal concluded that the service providers were professional employer organizations and the Department should not have attributed the employees' compensation to Adamo Demolition. The Tribunal imposed $721.60 in costs on the Department, finding that its position was devoid of arguable legal merit because of (1) its repeated challenges to professional employer organizations, and (2) its attempt to purposefully avoid the precedent established in Herald Wholesale.

II. INTERPRETATION OF MCL 208.4(4)

A. STANDARD OF REVIEW

This Court's review of the Tribunal's decision is limited.³ When a party does not dispute the facts or allege fraud, we review whether the Tribunal "made an error of law or adopted a wrong principle."⁴ This Court reviews de novo the interpretation and application of tax statutes.⁵

² Herald Wholesale, Inc v Dep't of Treasury, 262 Mich App 688; 687 NW2d 172 (2004).

³ Mich Props, LLC v Meridian Twp, 491 Mich 518, 527; 817 NW2d 548 (2012).

⁴ Id. at 527-528.

B. LEGAL STANDARDS

“The primary goal of statutory interpretation is to give effect to the Legislature’s intent.”⁶ If the statute’s language is not ambiguous, this Court will enforce the statute as written.⁷ This Court gives statutory language its plain and ordinary meaning.⁸ This Court applies the same principles to contractual interpretation, with the purpose of determining and enforcing the parties’ intent.⁹

C. PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYER ORGANIZATIONS UNDER MCL 208.4(4)

Under the Single Business Tax Act, now repealed,¹⁰ employers were required to include their employees’ compensation in their tax base.¹¹ Compensation included all fees paid to employees, officers, and directors.¹²

In MCL 208.4(4), the Legislature provided that an organization is a professional employer organization if it is

. . . an organization that provides the management and administration of the human resources and employer risk of another entity by contractually assuming substantial employer rights, responsibilities, and risk through a professional employer agreement that establishes an employer relationship with the leased officers or employees assigned to the other entity by doing all of the following:

- (a) Maintaining the right of direction and control of employees’ work, although this responsibility may be shared with the other entity.
- (b) Paying wages and employment taxes of the employees out of its own accounts.
- (c) Reporting, collecting, and depositing state and federal employment taxes for the employees.
- (d) Retaining the right to hire and fire employees.

⁵ Id. at 528; Ford Motor Co v City of Woodhaven, 475 Mich 425, 438; 716 NW2d 247 (2006).

⁶ Id.

⁷ Id. at 438-439.

⁸ Id. at 439.

⁹ See Klapp v United Ins Group Agency Inc, 468 Mich 459, 468; 663 NW2d 447 (2003); Harbor Park Market, Inc v Gronda, 277 Mich App 126, 130-131; 743 NW2d 585 (2007).

¹⁰ 2006 PA 325. Unless otherwise noted, all references in this opinion are to the former version of the Single Business Tax Act.

¹¹ MCL 208.9(5).

¹² MCL 208.4(3).

In Herald Wholesale, this Court opined that an employee paid by a professional employer organization under such a contract is an employee of that organization, not of the company that leases the employees. Thus, the employee's compensation is attributable to the professional employer organization, not the leasing company.¹³ This Court also opined that an officer or director of a company can be employed by a professional employer organization.¹⁴

D. ADAMO'S STATUS AS ADAMO DEMOLITION'S OWNER

The Department asserts that the service providers did not qualify as professional employer organizations under MCL 208.4(4)(a) or (d), and, therefore, the employees' compensation was attributable to Adamo Demolition.

First, the Department asserts that this Court's decision in Herald Wholesale is distinguishable because the employees in that case were not the company's owners. We conclude that Herald Wholesale is not distinguishable.

In Herald Wholesale, this Court held that the single business tax act did not require the plaintiffs to include in their tax base compensation that a professional employer organization paid to the plaintiff's corporate officers when those officers were compensated solely for their management responsibilities.¹⁵ The plaintiffs in that case were Herald Wholesale's corporate officers, whom Amstaff—the professional employer organization in that case—hired to perform managerial, administrative, and executive duties.¹⁶ The plaintiffs' agreement with Amstaff provided that Amstaff retained the right to hire, fire, and fully control all personnel decisions.¹⁷ Asserting that the plaintiffs were not Amstaff's employees, the Department attributed to Herald Wholesale the compensation that Amstaff paid to the plaintiffs¹⁸

This Court rejected the Department's assertion that the plaintiffs were not Amstaff's employees.¹⁹ This Court concluded in part that the recently enacted language of MCL 208.4(4) clearly contemplated that a professional employer organization could pay compensation to leased employees and officers.²⁰ This Court reached the same conclusion under the former language of MCL 208.5.²¹ This Court reasoned that the single business tax act relied on the federal definition

¹³ Herald Wholesale, Inc, 262 Mich App at 695.

¹⁴ Id. at 697; MCL 208.4(4).

¹⁵ Herald Wholesale, Inc, 262 Mich App at 691.

¹⁶ Id. at 692.

¹⁷ Id.

¹⁸ Id.

¹⁹ Id. at 691.

²⁰ Id. at 695, 697.

²¹ Id. at 697-698.

of employee, under 26 USC 3401(c), separately included officers in the definition of employees and thus indicated that an officer is an employee for tax purposes.²²

We conclude that Herald Wholesale is not distinguishable from the facts in this case. This Court's decision in Herald Wholesale heavily relied on the fact that the professional employer organization paid the corporation's officers solely for their management responsibilities, not for their actions in another capacity. Here, the parties stipulated that Adamo's duties as officer and director of Adamo Demolition were minimal. At the hearing before the Tribunal, Adamo testified that his responsibilities primarily included managing projects, maintaining customer relationship, coordinating with other managers, inspecting projects, and maintaining financial records.

The Tribunal found that the service providers did not compensate Adamo as an officer or director of Adamo Demolition. There is no indication that Adamo's compensation was in any way related to his status as the owner of Adamo Demolition. Thus, we conclude that the facts in Herald Wholesale are analogous to the facts in this case because there is no evidence in the record that the service providers compensated Adamo for anything other than his managerial and administrative duties.

Second, the Department asserts that the professional employer organization here did not meet MCL 208.4(4)(d) because the service providers could not fire Adamo as the owner of Adamo Demolition. We conclude that the service providers' ability to fire Adamo as an owner has no effect on the application of MCL 208.4(4), because the service providers could still fire Adamo as an employee.

Here, the service providers compensated Adamo for his management and administrative services—not services as an owner—to Adamo Demolition. Nothing in the service providers' agreements indicate that they required Adamo Demolition's consent to hire or fire employees, including Adamo, or provided that they could not replace Adamo with someone else who would provide the same services. Similarly, the service providers' contracts did not exclude Adamo from the employees over whom they had the right to direct or control. Thus, the service providers complied with MCL 208.4(4) because they retained the right to fire Adamo, or the right to direct and control his work, as an employee providing administrative and management services.

The Department asserts that the service providers did not retain the right to fire Adamo because such an action would have no practical effect. According to the Department, even if fired, Adamo could continue his activities on behalf of Adamo Demolition. However, if the service providers fired Adamo, the practical effect would be that he would no longer be the employee of the service providers. They would no longer pay his compensation and withhold his federal income taxes. Thus, any compensation for his performance of the same activities would have to come from Adamo Demolition, not the service providers. In such a circumstance, we would agree that Adamo's compensation would be properly attributable to Adamo Demolition.

²² Id. at 698.

But that is not the circumstance of this case. Here, Adamo provided management and administrative services, and the service providers paid his compensation for providing those services.

We conclude that the service providers' retention of the right to direct, control, hire, and fire employees, including Adamo, complied with MCL 208.4(4)(a) and (d).

E. THE EFFECT OF E-CONNECT'S DISCLAIMER

The Department contends that Adamo Demolition's agreement with E-Connect failed to comply with MCL 208.4(4)(a) because E-Connect disclaimed responsibility for employees' day-to-day supervision and control. We disagree.

MCL 208.4(4)(a) allows a professional employer organization to share "the right of direction and control of employees' work." The question here is whether E-Connect's contractual language entirely disclaimed the right to direct and control employees' work or whether it shared that right with Adamo Demolition. The Tribunal concluded that E-Connect's disclaimer effectively shared the right to direct and control employees' work. We agree with the Tribunal's conclusion.

Here, under the plain language of the contract, E-Connect disclaimed only responsibility "for the day-to-day supervision and control of employees . . ." E-Connect did not disclaim the right to direct and control employees' non-daily activities, and specifically retained rights concerning major employment decisions that did not concern daily activities, such as hiring, firing, discipline, and grievance handling. As a result of the contracts, the service providers were responsible for several significant employment responsibilities, including employees' payroll, tax withholding, benefits, records, insurance, and employment policies. These responsibilities come with significant potential liabilities. We conclude that the Tribunal did not err when it concluded that E-Connect's disclaimer indicated that it and Adamo Demolition shared rights to direct and control employees' work, with Adamo Demolition supervising and controlling the employees' daily activities and E-Connect supervising and controlling the employees' non-daily activities.

III. TAXATION OF COSTS

A. STANDARD OF REVIEW

Whether an action or claim is frivolous is a factual finding.²³ This Court must accept the Tribunal's factual findings if "competent, material, and substantial evidence on the record" supports them.²⁴ Substantial evidence supports the Tribunal's findings if a reasonable person

²³ Pontiac Country Club v Waterford Twp, 299 Mich App 427, 439; 830 NW2d 785 (2013).

²⁴ Michigan Props, 491 Mich at 527; Pontiac Country Club, 299 Mich App at 439.

would accept the evidence as sufficient to support the conclusion.²⁵ Substantial evidence “may be substantially less than a preponderance.”²⁶

B. LEGAL STANDARDS

A court may find that a party’s action is frivolous under MCR 2.625(A)(2) when (1) the party initiated the suit for purposes of harassment, (2) “[t]he party’s legal position was devoid of arguable legal merit,” or (3) “[t]he party had no reasonable basis to believe that the facts underlying that party’s legal position were in fact true.”^[27]

A claim is not frivolous merely because the party advancing the claim does not prevail on it.²⁸

C. APPLYING THE STANDARDS

The Department contends that the Tribunal erred by finding that it was attempting to purposefully avoid the application of clearly established precedent. We conclude that evidence on the record did not support the Tribunal’s finding that the Department’s action was frivolous.

Here, the Tribunal found that the Department’s action was frivolous for two reasons: (1) it continued to challenge the ability of operating companies to use professional employer organizations after the Legislature enacted MCL 208.4(4), and (2) it was attempting to purposefully avoid this Court’s decision in Herald Wholesale, which provided “clear guidance” under the facts in this case.

There is no evidence in the record supporting the Tribunal’s finding that the Department continuously attempted to challenge the ability of companies to use professional employer organizations for officers and employees because the record contains no evidence of repeated challenges by the Department on this issue. The only challenge contained in this record is the Department’s challenge in this case. Adamo Demolition did not provide any evidence that the Department had challenged companies’ uses of professional employer organizations in other cases. We conclude that competent, material, and substantial evidence did not support the Tribunal’s finding.

There is also no evidence in the record supporting the Tribunal’s finding that this Court’s decision in Herald Wholesale provided clear guidance that the Department was attempting to purposefully avoid. To the extent that the Tribunal relied on its finding that the Department repeatedly attempted to challenge professional employment organizations to support its ²⁵ In re Payne, 444 Mich 679, 692; 514 NW2d 121 (1994); Wayne Co v Michigan State Tax Comm, 261 Mich App 174, 186-187; 682 NW2d 100 (2004).

²⁶ In re Payne, 444 Mich at 692; Wayne Co, 261 Mich App at 186-187.

²⁷ Pontiac Country Club, 299 Mich App at 439, quoting MCL 600.2591(3)(a).

²⁸ Kitchen v Kitchen, 465 Mich 654, 662; 641 NW2d 245 (2002).

determination that the Department was purposefully avoiding application of Herald Wholesale, as noted above, the record does not support this finding.

Further, a claim is devoid of arguable legal merit if it is not sufficiently grounded in law or fact, such as when it violates “basic, longstanding, and unmistakably evident” precedent.²⁹ Whether employees’ compensation is properly attributable to the professional employer organization or the leasing company under the single business tax act has been the subject of several conflicting decisions: the Tribunal’s decision in Bandit Industries v Dep’t of Treasury,³⁰ the Legislature’s subsequent enactment of MCL 208.4(4), this Court’s decision in Herald Wholesale, and the Tribunal’s decision in McCartney Enterprises, Inc v Dep’t of Treasury that Herald Wholesale should be limited to the facts in that case.³¹ This frequently shifting legal framework does not provide longstanding and unmistakably evident precedent.

Further, the Department’s position in this case was substantially similar to its position in McCartney Enterprises, a 2006 decision in which the Tribunal concluded that Herald Wholesale did not determine the outcome of the case, when the case involved an employee of a professional employer organization who was also the company’s owner.³² In that case, the Tribunal determined that, because the owner in that case could terminate the contractual relationship, he was not an employee of the professional employer organization.³³ Below, the Department contended that the Tribunal should apply its precedent in McCartney Enterprises to this case. While both the Tribunal and this Court disagree with the Department’s assertion as it applies to Adamo Demolition, the Tribunal’s decision in McCartney Enterprises further undermines the Tribunal’s conclusion that this Court’s decision in Herald Wholesale provided clear guidance on the issue specific to this case.

Therefore, we conclude that substantial evidence on the record did not support the Tribunal’s findings in support of its determination that the Department’s position was devoid of arguable legal merit, and reverse the trial court’s award of costs to Adamo Demolition.

IV. CONCLUSION

We conclude that the Tribunal did not make an error of law when it determined that the employees’ compensation was properly attributable to the service providers because the contracts gave them the power to hire, fire, direct, and control employees, including Adamo. But ²⁹ Id.; DeWald v Isola, 180 Mich App 129, 136; 446 NW2d 620 (1989).

³⁰ Unpublished opinion of the Court of Claims, issued September 7, 2000 (Docket No. 99-17260-CM). See Herald Wholesale, 262 Mich App at 692-693.

³¹ McCartney Enterprises, Inc v Dep’t of Treas, 16 MTTR 443, 446 (Docket No. 321164, July 20, 2006).

³² Id.

³³ Id.

we conclude that substantial evidence in the record did not support the Tribunal's finding that the Department's position in this case was devoid of arguable legal merit.

We affirm the Tribunal's decision regarding the service providers' status as professional employer organizations, but reverse the Tribunal's award of costs, and remand. We do not retain jurisdiction.

/s/ William C. Whitbeck

/s/ Kurtis T. Wilder

/s/ Amy Ronayne Krause