1 OPINION

2 ZAMORA, Judge.

3 {1} Casey J. (Father) appeals the termination of his parental rights to T.J., R.J., and 4 C.J. (Children) not for purposes of restoring his parental rights in the Children, but 5 rather to require the Children, Youth and Families Department (the Department) to 6 place Children with a specific relative, or alternatively any interested relative. Father
7 argues that the Department failed to comply with New Mexico’s Abuse and Neglect 8 Act, NMSA 1978, §§ 32A-4-1 to -34 (1993, as amended through 2014), and the 9 federal Indian Child Welfare Act (the ICWA), 25 U.S.C. §§ 1901 to 1963 (2013), 10 with regard to the placement of Children. Father also argues that he was denied due 11 process as well as a fair and impartial termination proceeding. We hold that the 12 Department’s placement of Children complied with the state and federal 13 requirements. As to the termination proceedings, we hold that Father was afforded 14 due process, and was not deprived of fair and impartial proceedings. Accordingly, we 15 affirm.

16 BACKGROUND

17 {2} The Department filed a neglect/abuse petition against Father and Andrea T.
18 (Mother) regarding Children. The Department took Children into custody in February 19 2011 due to ongoing concerns related to each parent’s issues with substance abuse

1 and domestic violence. At the time Children were taken into custody, Father was 2 incarcerated. The district court held a custody hearing on March 1, 2011. The district
3 court found that the ICWA applied because Father, Mother, and Children are all 4 registered members of the Navajo Nation.

5 {3} At the adjudicatory/dispositional hearing on April 6, 2011, both Father and 6 Mother entered pleas of no contest to the allegations in the neglect/abuse petition, 7 pursuant to Section 32A-4-2(E)(2). The court adopted treatment plans for both 8 parents, designed to address the domestic violence and substance abuse issues. The 9 treatment plans also required supervised visitation and regular communication with 10 the Department.

11 {4} Father was incarcerated sporadically throughout the pendency of the case.
12 Father attended most of the monthly meetings with the Department permanency 13 planning worker when he was not incarcerated, but did not complete parenting 14 training, domestic violence or substance abuse counseling, and was twice discharged 15 for noncompliance. Father was inconsistent in his visits with Children and his last 16 visit with Children was June 29, 2012. After the June 29, 2012 visit, Father called for 17 a few weeks with excuses for missing visits and after that the Department permanency 18 planning worker did not hear from Father again.

1 {5} On January 31, 2013, the Department filed a motion for termination of parental 2 rights of Mother and Father, both members of the Navajo Nation. On April 24, 2013, 3 Mother voluntarily relinquished her parental rights. The case proceeded to trial.
4 Father was present, but did not challenge the evidence that he had failed to participate 5 in his treatment plan and that he had abandoned Children. Father did challenge the 6 compliance of Children's foster placements with the requirements of the ICWA.
7 However, Father argued that the Department's failure to place Children according to 8 the ICWA's placement preferences constituted a failure to make active efforts to 9 prevent the breakup of the Indian family, as required by the ICWA.

10 {6} At the conclusion of the termination of parental rights trial, the district court 11 announced its decision indicating it was granting the Department's motion to 12 terminate Father's parental rights. Father filed a motion for reconsideration, which 13 was heard on August 1, 2013. On October 29, 2013, the district court entered a 14 judgment terminating Father's parental rights to Children. This appeal followed.

15 DISCUSSION

16 {7} Father makes a number of arguments in support of reversal for purposes of 17 mandating a relative placement for Children and not the restoration of his parental 18 rights. The majority of these arguments relate to the fact that Children were never 19 placed in foster care with relatives, members of the Navajo Nation, or other Indian

1 families. Father argues that the Department failed to make active efforts to prevent 2 the breakup of the Indian family and to comply with the relative placement
3 preferences under the ICWA and the New Mexico Abuse and Neglect Act. Father 4 also contends that in the absence of full compliance with the placement preferences, 5 he was denied due process of law.

6 {8} To the extent that any of Father’s claims relate to the current placement of 7 Children, we decline to address them. Father may not challenge the placement of 8 Children after the termination. See § 32A-4-29(L) (“A judgment of the court 9 terminating parental rights divests the parent of all legal rights and privileges.”).
10 Accordingly, our analysis of Father’s claims is limited to the foster care placement 11 of Children prior to the termination of Father’s parental rights.

12 Children’s Placement Under the ICWA and the New Mexico Abuse and Neglect
13 Act

14 {9} Interpretation of the ICWA and the New Mexico Abuse and Neglect Act 15 presents questions of law that we review de novo. State ex rel. Children, Youth &
16 Families Dep’t v. Marsalee P., 2013-NMCA-062, ¶ 12, 302 P.3d 761. “[The] ICWA 17 is a remedial statute in that it was enacted to stem the alarmingly high percentage of 18 Indian families being separated by removal of children through custody 19 proceedings[,]” and we therefore construe it liberally in order to effectuate its 20 purpose. State ex rel. Children, Youth & Families Dep’t v. Marlene C., 2011-NMSC-

1 005, ¶ 17, 149 N.M. 315, 248 P.3d 863 (internal quotation marks and citation 2 omitted).

3 {10} The ICWA was enacted to address the consequences of abusive child welfare 4 practices that separated Indian children from their families and tribes through 5 adoption or foster care placement, usually in non-Indian homes. Miss. Band of 6 Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield, 490 U.S. 30, 32-33 (1989). The stated purpose of the 7 ICWA is

8 to protect the best interests of Indian children and to promote the 9 stability and security of Indian tribes and families by the establishment 10 of minimum Federal standards for the removal of Indian children from 11 their families and the placement of such children in foster or adoptive 12 homes which will reflect the unique values of Indian culture, and by 13 providing for assistance to Indian tribes in the operation of child and 14 family service programs.

15 25 U.S.C. § 1902. The overarching concern of Congress and the proponents of the 16 ICWA, was the maintenance of the family and tribal relationships existing in Indian 17 homes. Holyfield, 490 U.S. at 37.

18 One of the most serious failings of the present system is that Indian 19 children are removed from the custody of their natural parents by 20 nontribal government authorities who have no basis for intelligently 21 evaluating the cultural and social premises underlying Indian home life 22 and childrearing. Many of the individuals who decide the fate of our 23 children are at best ignorant of our cultural values, and at worst 24 contemptful of the Indian way and convinced that removal, usually to a 25 non-Indian household or institution, can only benefit an Indian child.

1 Id. at 34-35 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). At the core of the ICWA
2 is the tribal interest in the impact that the large numbers of adoptions of Indian 3 children by non-Indians have on the tribes themselves. Id. at 49-52. The ICWA 4 “recognizes that the tribe has an interest in the child which is distinct from but on a 5 parity with the interest of the parents.” Id. at 52 (internal quotation marks and citation 6 omitted).

7 {11} The ICWA establishes federal standards for state-court child custody
8 proceedings involving Indian children. Id. at 36-37. As relevant here, the ICWA
9 conditions involuntary termination of parental rights with respect to Indian children 10 on a showing that active efforts have been made to prevent the “breakup of the Indian 11 family,” 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d); and provides preferences for the foster care placement 12 of Indian children with a member of the Indian child’s extended family; a foster care 13 home licensed, approved and specified by the Indian child’s tribe; an Indian foster 14 care home licensed or approved by an authorized non-Indian licensing authority; or 15 an institution for children approved by the Indian child’s tribe or operated by an 16 Indian organization that has a program suitable to meet the Indian child’s needs.
17 25 U.S.C. § 1915(b). The New Mexico Abuse and Neglect Act has incorporated the 18 ICWA’s placement preferences. See NMSA 1978, § 32A-4-9(A) (1993).

1 Active Efforts Designed to Prevent the Breakup of the Indian Family

2 {12} Father contends that the Department did not make active efforts to prevent the 3 breakup of his family because Children were not placed with relatives and because 4 Children were not always placed together in one foster home. We understand the 5 basis of Father’s argument to be the requirements for preservation of the Indian 6 family as set forth in 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d).

7 {13} Section 1912(d) of the ICWA provides that a party seeking to terminate 8 parental rights to an Indian child under state law “shall satisfy the court that active 9 efforts have been made to provide remedial services and rehabilitative programs 10 designed to prevent the breakup of the Indian family and that these efforts have 11 proved unsuccessful.” Adoptive Couple v. Baby Girl, ___ U.S. ___, ___, 133 S. Ct.
12 2552, 2562 (2013) (emphasis, internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Efforts 13 to provide remedial services under this section are intended to “alleviate the need to 14 remove the Indian child from his or her parents or Indian custodians.” Id. at 2563 15 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

16 {14} Section 1912(d) of the ICWA should be read in harmony with “§ 1912(e) and 17 § 1912(f), both of which condition the outcome of proceedings on the merits of an 18 Indian child’s ‘continued custody’ with his parent.” Adoptive Couple, 133 S. Ct. at 19 2563. Thus, 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d) requires that Indian parents be “provided with

1 access to remedial services and rehabilitative programs . . . so that their custody might 2 be continued in a way that avoids foster-care placement under § 1912(e) or 3 termination of parental rights under § 1912(f).” Adoptive Couple, 133 S. Ct. at 2563 4 (internal quotation marks omitted). “[T]he provision of remedial services and 5 rehabilitative programs under § 1912(d) supports the continued custody that is 6 protected by § 1912(e) and § 1912(f).” Adoptive Couple, 133 S. Ct. at 2563 (internal 7 quotation marks omitted). It does not apply to facilitate the placement of the child in 8 compliance with the placement preferences listed in § 1915. Adoptive Couple, 133 S.
9 Ct. at 2558.

10 {15} Here, Father’s argument is focused on Children’s foster placements throughout 11 the case, not on the Department’s efforts to prevent a disruption in custody or parental 12 rights as contemplated by 25 U.S.C. § 1915(d). Father does not address the 13 Department’s efforts to provide him with remedial services and rehabilitative 14 programs prior to the removal of Children from the home, or the Department’s efforts 15 to engage him in such services and programs through his treatment plan. As a result, 16 whether the Department made active efforts to prevent the breakup of the Indian 17 family, as required by 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d), is not an issue in this appeal. See In re
18 Doe, 1982-NMSC-099, ¶ 3, 98 N.M. 540, 650 P.2d 824 (recognizing that appellate 19 courts should not reach issues not raised by the parties). Our relevant inquiry is

1 whether the ICWA placement preferences were followed, and if not, whether good 2 cause existed to deviate from them.

3 The ICWA Placement Preferences

4 {16} The ICWA and the New Mexico Abuse and Neglect Act specify that, absent 5 good cause to the contrary, foster care placement shall be with: “[1] a member of 6 the Indian child’s extended family; [(2)] a foster home licensed, approved, or 7 specified by the Indian child’s tribe; [(3)] an Indian foster home licensed or approved 8 by an authorized non-Indian licensing authority; or [(4)] an institution for [the] 9 children approved by an Indian tribe or operated by an Indian organization which has 10 a program suitable to meet the Indian child’s needs.” See 25 U.S.C. § 1915(b); 11 Section 32A-4-9(A). The party seeking to deviate from the placement preferences 12 bears the burden of establishing the existence of good cause to do so. Bureau of 13 Indian Affairs, Guidelines for State Courts; Indian Child Custody Proceedings, 44
14 Fed. Reg. 67584, 67594 (Nov. 26, 1979). In determining whether good cause exists 15 for deviating from the placement preferences, a court is required to examine the 16 reasons for deviation in light of “the prevailing social and cultural standards of the 17 Indian community.” 25 U.S.C. § 1915(d). The recently issued Bureau of Indian 18 Affairs Guidelines (BIA Guidelines) recognize that any party may raise the issue of 1 whether good cause not to follow the ICWA placement preferences exists. 80 Fed.

2 Reg. 10150, § F(4) (February 25, 2015).

3 {17} In this case, the district court found that good cause to deviate from the ICWA 4 placement preferences existed, beyond a reasonable doubt. This standard applies to 5 termination of parental rights under the ICWA. See 25 U.S.C. § 1912(f) (“No 6 termination of parental rights may be ordered in such proceeding in the absence of a 7 determination, supported by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt including testimony 8 of qualified expert witnesses, that the continued custody of the child by the parent or 9 Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical damage to the 10 child.”). However, neither 25 U.S.C. § 1915(b) nor Section 32A-4-9(A) of the Abuse 11 and Neglect Act identify a standard of proof for the good cause exception to the 12 placement preferences identified in the statute. We are also unaware of any New 13 Mexico case law that has established a standard as it relates to the good cause 14 exception. We need not decide on a standard for two reasons. First, the issue is not 15 squarely before us as neither party has raised the issue. See In re Doe, 1982-NMSC-16 099, ¶ 3 (recognizing that appellate courts should not reach issues not raised by the 17 parties). Second, under the facts of this case, we conclude that the district court’s 18 findings of good cause to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences are

1 appropriate whether the burden of proof was preponderance of the evidence, clear and 2 convincing, or beyond a reasonable doubt.

3 Deviation From The Placement Preferences Was Supported by Good Cause

4 {18} Father argues that the district court’s determination that good cause existed to 5 deviate from the ICWA placement preferences was not supported by the evidence.
6 The ICWA does not define “good cause.” However, the BIA Guidelines for state 7 courts to use in Indian child custody proceedings provide that a determination of good 8 cause not to follow the placement preferences should be based on one or more of the 9 following considerations: a “request of the biological parents or the child when the 10 child is of sufficient age”; the “extraordinary physical or emotional needs of the child 11 as established by testimony of a qualified expert witness”; and the “unavailability of 12 suitable families for placement after a diligent search has been completed for families 13 meeting the preference criteria.” Guidelines for State Courts; Indian Child Custody 14 Proceedings, 44 Fed. Reg. at 67,594.

15 {19} There are some courts that limit their good cause analysis to the considerations
16 listed in the BIA Guidelines. See In re Custody of S.E.G., 521 N.W.2d 357, 362 17 (Minn. 1994) (stating that simply applying the best interests standard is contrary to 18 the plain language of the ICWA read as a whole, and to its legislative history); see 19 also In re Adoption of Riffle, 922 P.2d 510, 514 (Mont. 1996) (deciding it is improper

1 to apply best interest when determining good cause because the ICWA expresses 2 presumption that it is in the Indian child’s best interest to be placed in conformance 3 with the preferences).

4 {20} Other courts have held that the considerations listed in the BIA Guidelines are 5 not exhaustive. See In re Adoption of M., 832 P.2d 518, 522 (Wash. Ct. App. 1992)
6 (“Good cause is a matter of discretion, and discretion must be exercised in light of 7 many factors. These include but are not necessarily limited to the best interests of the 8 child, the wishes of the biological parents, the suitability of persons preferred for 9 placement, the child’s ties to the tribe, and the child’s ability to make any cultural 10 adjustments necessitated by a particular placement.” (citations omitted)); see also In 11 re Adoption of F.H., 851 P.2d 1361, 1363-64 (Alaska 1993) (“Whether there is good 12 cause to deviate in a particular case depends on many factors including, but not 13 necessarily limited to, the best interests of the child, the wishes of the biological 14 parents, the suitability of persons preferred for placement and the child’s ties to the 15 tribe.”).

16 {21} NMSA 1978, § 32A-1-3(A), (B) (2009) provide, in pertinent part, that the 17 Children’s Code shall be interpreted and construed to effectuate the following 18 legislative purposes:

- 19 A. [F]irst to provide for the care, protection and wholesome mental 20 and physical development of children coming within the provisions of

1 the Children’s Code and then to preserve the unity of the family
2 whenever possible. A child’s health and safety shall be the paramount
3 concern. Permanent separation of a child from the child’s family, 4 however, would especially be considered when the child or another child 5 of the parent has suffered permanent or severe injury or repeated abuse.
6 It is the intent of the [L]egislature that, to the maximum extent possible, 7 children in New Mexico shall be reared as members of a family unit; 8

9 B. [T]o provide judicial and other procedures through which the 10 provisions of the Children’s Code are executed and enforced and in 11 which the parties are assured a fair hearing and their constitutional and 12 other legal rights are recognized and enforced[.]

13 (Emphasis added.) Thus, in determining the existence of good cause to deviate from 14 the ICWA placement preferences, the court must give primary consideration to the 15 children’s best interests, but must ensure that the constitutional and other legal rights 16 of all the parties are considered.

17 {22} We recognize that parents have a “fundamental liberty interest in the care, 18 custody, and management of their children.” State ex rel. Children, Youth & Families
19 Dep’t v. Amanda M., 2006-NMCA-133, ¶ 18, 140 N.M. 578, 144 P.3d 137. Parents 20 also have a right to pursue familial relationships with their children. See Roberts v.
21 U.S. Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 618-20 (1984) (holding that familial associations are 22 included in the fundamental right to freedom of association); see also Lucero v.
23 Salazar, 1994-NMCA-066, ¶¶ 6-9, 117 N.M. 803, 877 P.2d 1106 (recognizing the 24 fundamental right of familial association or right to intimate familial relationship).

1 As discussed above, the Indian tribe has an interest in Indian children that is in parity
2 with that of the parents. Holyfield, 490 U.S. at 52.

3 {23} However, it is well established that these rights are not absolute; rather, they 4 must yield to the “best interests and welfare of the children.” State ex rel. Children,
5 Youth & Families Dep’t v. John R., 2009-NMCA-025, ¶ 27, 145 N.M. 636, 203 P.3d
6 167 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). In assessing the children’s best 7 interests, it is imperative that the children are recognized as people who have 8 fundamental interests of their own that are constitutionally protected. See In re Gault, 9 387 U.S. 1, 13, (1967) (holding that the Fourteenth Amendment and the Bill of Rights 10 apply to children.); see also In re Guardianship of Victoria R., 2009-NMCA-007, 11 ¶ 11, 145 N.M. 500, 201 P.3d 169 (stating that a child is a person for purposes of the 12 Fourteenth Amendment). The children have the fundamental right to be protected 13 from abuse and neglect, and to have a permanent and stable placement. Id. They “are 14 not simply chattels belonging to the parent, but have fundamental interests of their 15 own that may diverge from the interests of the parent.” Id. (internal quotation marks 16 and citation omitted).

17 Standard of Review for Good Cause Determinations

18 {24} The determination of good cause to deviate from the ICWA placement 19 preferences is a legal standard. See Dep’t of Human Servs. v. Three Affiliated Tribes

1 of Fort Berthold Reservation, 238 P.3d 40, 50 (Or. Ct. App. 2010). Accordingly, “we 2 must determine whether the facts, as found by the trial court and as supported by 3 evidence in the record, are legally sufficient to establish ‘good cause’ to depart from 4 [the] ICWA’s placement preferences.” Id. “On appeal, this Court does not re-weigh 5 the evidence, rather, we view the evidence in the light most favorable to the 6 prevailing party.” State ex rel. Children, Youth & Families Dep’t v. Jerry K., 2015-7 NMCA-047, ¶ 24, ___ P.3d ___. “Our overarching goal when interpreting the ICWA 8 is to effectuate Congress’s intent.” Marlene C., 2011-NMSC-005, ¶ 15.

9 The District Court’s Findings of Good Cause

10 {25} The district court heard evidence related to Children’s placement at the 11 adjudicatory/dispositional hearing, the initial judicial review hearing, five 12 permanency hearings, the termination of parental rights trial, and the hearing on 13 Father’s motion to reconsider. The district court consistently found that good cause 14 existed to deviate from the ICWA’s placement preferences.

15 The Adjudication and the Initial Judicial Review

16 {26} The adjudicatory/dispositional hearing was held on April 6, 2011. The ICWA
17 qualified expert witness (QEW) working for the Navajo Nation Children and Family 18 Services testified that she was aware of Children’s current placements and that the 19 placements did not meet the ICWA placement preferences, but that good cause

1 existed to deviate from the preferences. The district court found that the ICWA 2 placement preferences had not been followed because the Department had been 3 unable to find an ICWA approved home, and that the Department was working with 4 the Navajo Nation to determine an appropriate relative placement.

5 {27} The testimony of the QEW, that good cause existed to deviate from the ICWA
6 placement preferences, was sufficient to meet any standard. Under the ICWA, no 7 foster care placement for an Indian child may be ordered “in the absence of a 8 determination, supported by clear and convincing evidence, including testimony of 9 qualified expert witnesses, that the continued custody of the child by the parent or 10 Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical damage to the 11 child.” § 1912 (e). The best interests of Indian children will often be directly linked 12 to their tribal culture. Guidelines for State Courts; Indian Child Custody Proceedings, 13 44 Fed. Reg. at 67593. The purpose of the QEW is to provide testimony related to the 14 Indian child’s best interests from the perspective of someone with expert knowledge 15 of tribal culture and childrearing practices. Id.

16 {28} In this case, the QEW was a social worker for the Navajo Nation Children and 17 Family Services who had been employed with the Navajo Nation for over a year-and-18 a-half, and who was knowledgeable about the provisions of the ICWA. The QEW 19 explained that she was knowledgeable about the practices and traditions of the 1 Navajo Nation as a registered member of the tribe and as an active participant in the 2 Navajo practices and traditions. The district court did not err in relying on her 3 testimony that, at the time of the adjudicatory/dispositional hearing, good cause 4 existed to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences.

5 {29} On June 3, 2011, the district court held an initial judicial review hearing.
6 Information was presented that the Department was not able to find a placement for 7 Children together. Children were placed in two separate foster homes and were 8 visiting with each other. The Department was working with Mother, Father, and the 9 Navajo Nation to determine an appropriate placement. The QEW testified that the 10 Department was looking at two relatives, who did not live on the reservation, for 11 possible placement. The Department permanency planning worker explained that 12 three relatives had come forward: (1) a member of the Zia Pueblo, but the Zia Pueblo 13 would not allow the Department to conduct a home study because Children were not 14 Zia members; (2) Children's paternal uncle who withdrew for health reasons; and (3) 15 a paternal aunt, Bernice Strait (Aunt), for whom the Department was working on 16 approval to go forward with the home study process.

17 {30} The district court encouraged the Department and the QEW to stay in touch and 18 work out a suitable placement. The QEW did not identify any special needs of 19 Children, and stated her approval of Children's placement. The district court found

1 that, at that time, there was good cause not to follow the ICWA placement 2 preferences.

3 {31} In light of the Department's efforts to find relative placements for Children, the 4 unavailability of ICWA-compliant placements, and the QEW's approval and 5 statement of good cause, we conclude that the district court did not err in determining 6 that good cause existed to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences at the time 7 of the initial judicial review.

8 The Permanency Hearings

9 {32} The initial permanency hearing was held on November 30, 2011. The 10 Department reported that it was continuing to look for a placement that met the 11 ICWA placement preferences and was working with the Navajo Nation to identify an 12 appropriate relative. The Guardian Ad Litem (GAL) testified that Children were 13 doing well in their respective foster homes, but that when there was visitation, there 14 was some troublesome sibling interaction that may need to be dealt with 15 therapeutically.

16 {33} The CASA volunteer, who was a member of the Navajo Nation, reported that 17 she was helping to foster Children's cultural connections. She stated that she was able 18 to provide Children with traditional outfits including jewelry and moccasins, and that 19 she was helping out with T.J.'s coming of age ceremony, which was a big part of 1 T.J's life. The Department indicated that Aunt had a good relationship with Children, 2 and that she had been very supportive and had been visiting them. The Department

3 also reported that Aunt had provided traditional items for Children to wear on feast 4 days, which was very meaningful to Children.

5 {34} A new social worker from the Navajo Nation, also admitted as a QEW, had 6 been assigned to the case. She requested that Mother and Father provide names of 7 relatives on the reservation for consideration as potential placements for Children.
8 Mother and Father were present and both indicated that they wanted Children to be 9 placed with Aunt. The Department explained that a home study was started with 10 Aunt, but that Aunt had withdrawn from consideration because she was caring for her 11 mother. However, at the time of the hearing, Aunt was again expressing an interest 12 in having Children placed with her and the Department was pursuing that placement.
13 The court stated its support for pursuing and finalizing placement of Children with 14 Aunt. The Navajo Nation did not object to Aunt as a possible placement.

15 {35} In its first permanency hearing order, the district court found that the ICWA 16 placement preferences were not being followed because the Department had been 17 unable to locate an ICWA approved home. However, the court also found that the 18 Department was working with the Navajo Nation to determine an appropriate relative 19 placement, and that the Department was working with the Navajo Nation and the

1 family to preserve and maintain Children’s cultural connection. The evidence 2 presented at the first permanency hearing showed that the Department was actively 3 pursuing relative placement options for Children, and that placement in accordance 4 with the ICWA had not yet been possible due to the unwillingness or unavailability 5 of relative placements. The Department also showed that it was making efforts toward 6 addressing the special needs of Children and promoting their connections with their 7 heritage. Father’s request, that Aunt be considered as a placement option, was being 8 actively pursued by the Department. We conclude that the district court did not err in 9 finding there was good cause to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences at the 10 first permanency hearing.

11 {36} A second permanency hearing was held on February 22, 2012. Father was not 12 present. Father’s attorney could not reach Father and did not know his location. At 13 the February 2012 hearing, it was reported that Children were doing relatively well 14 in their current placements. R.J. and C.J. were receiving speech and language therapy.
15 No other special needs were identified.

16 {37} It was also reported that Aunt had again withdrawn from the home study 17 process and the Department had been actively trying to find other relatives. The 18 permanency planning worker stated that she had requested names of relatives from 19 Father, Mother, and Aunt, and had even asked Children if there were relatives that

1 they would like to see more often. The relatives that had been considered for 2 placement at the time of the hearing had been ineligible due to their backgrounds.

3 {38} When asked, the QEW indicated that she did not believe there was ever good 4 cause to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences, but that she understood that 5 the Department could not find Navajo or Native American foster homes for Children.
6 The Department indicated that it would accept help from the Navajo Nation in 7 locating potential relative or Navajo placements for Children. The district court asked 8 the Navajo Nation to assist the Department in finding a suitable ICWA placement.
9 The district court found that good cause existed to deviate from the ICWA placement
10 preferences, and encouraged the Navajo Nation and the Department to work together 11 in finding a suitable, ICWA-compliant placement for Children.

12 {39} The evidence presented at the second permanency hearing showed the 13 unavailability of suitable relatives, Navajo, or other Native American placements. The 14 absence of appropriate ICWA approved placements, along with the continued efforts 15 by the Department and the Navajo Nation, constituted good cause to deviate from the 16 ICWA placement preferences. Additionally, there was no indication by the GAL or 17 the Navajo Nation that Children's needs were not being met in their placements at 18 that time. We conclude the district court did not err in finding good cause to deviate 19 from the placement preferences at the second permanency hearing.

1 {40} A third permanency hearing was held on August 20, 2012. Father was not 2 present and his attorney was unable to contact or locate him. The Department reported
3 that Children were all placed together in a new foster placement. The new placement
4 was not an adoptive home for Children and the Department indicated that it wanted
5 to get Children free for adoption so that the Department could start the adoption 6 recruitment effort. The GAL reported that Children were doing well in the new 7 placement where they were all together. She also stated Children were involved in 8 therapy and with cultural activities through the Native American Community 9 Academy (NACA), where T.J. attended school.

10 {41} The Department reported that it had located some paternal relatives that were 11 willing to be considered for placement, but they had withdrawn from the home study 12 process because it was too invasive. The permanency planning worker then explained 13 that several relatives had been located for possible placement but that none wanted 14 to step forward because they were fearful of Father and Mother. She also explained 15 that the Department had considered Aunt as a placement three times, and Father's 16 brother had also indicated that he would be a placement option, but twice withdrew.
17 The Department also informed the court that it had maintained contact with Aunt and 18 that Aunt had provided the name of a third cousin that the Department could contact

1 regarding placement. The Department had also asked Aunt to look into clan members 2 that may provide potential placements.

3 {42} The Department asked for assistance from the Navajo Nation in locating 4 potential Navajo placements. The QEW indicated that she still needed to rule out any 5 proposed placements by their adoption unit and requested a photograph and profile
6 of Children so that a request for certified homes to consider placement of Children 7 could be made.

8 {43} The district court found that the ICWA placement preferences had not been 9 followed; however, “good cause exist[ed] for deviating from the . . . placement 10 preferences because no relative, no Navajo, and no Indian homes [had] been 11 identified and approved for placement.” The court further found that the “Department 12 [was,] through its treatment plan, . . . ensuring that [C]hildren’s cultural ties [were] 13 being protected and fostered.”

14 {44} The Department’s inability to place Children in compliance with the ICWA 15 placement preferences stemmed primarily from the unavailability of suitable families 16 for placement. There was no testimony to indicate Children had special needs that 17 were unmet in their current placement. We also note that there was no objection to 18 the placement by the parents or the Navajo Nation. We conclude that the district court

1 appropriately found that there was good cause to deviate from the placement
2 preferences at the third permanency hearing.

3 {45} On February 19, 2013, a fourth permanency hearing was held. Father was not 4 present and his attorney was unable to locate him. At that hearing, the Department 5 reported that R.J. and C.J. had been placed in treatment foster care because they 6 needed a higher level of care. The Department also indicated that it had been 7 unsuccessful in finding and qualifying a suitable relative or Native American 8 placement for Children. The GAL reported that R.J. and C.J. had experienced 9 significant and troubling behaviors that necessitated their transition to a treatment 10 foster care facility. She informed the court that T.J. remained placed in her original 11 foster home and that she was doing well in that placement and at school where her 12 cultural ties were being protected and fostered.

13 {46} The district court asked the QEW what the Navajo Nation's position was on the 14 efforts of the Department and on whether good cause existed to deviate from the 15 ICWA placement preferences. The QEW stated that the Navajo Nation supported the 16 Department's efforts to find permanency for Children; however, the Navajo Nation 17 was still looking for possible relative placements on the reservation, and that a 18 referral had been made to the Navajo Nation's adoption unit. The Navajo Nation had

1 given approval for the Department to conduct a nationwide search for an ICWA 2 preferred home suitable for permanent placement.

3 {47} The district court found that the Department had made active efforts to comply 4 with the ICWA placement preferences, that the Department had proven beyond a 5 reasonable doubt that good cause existed to deviate from the preferences, and that the 6 Navajo Nation concurred with the placement under the circumstances. The 7 Department's inability to place Children in compliance with the ICWA placement 8 preferences stemmed primarily from the unavailability of suitable families for 9 placement. There was no testimony to indicate Children had special needs that were 10 unmet in their current placement. We also note that there was no objection to the 11 placement by the parents or the Navajo Nation. We conclude that the district court 12 appropriately found that there was good cause to deviate from the placement 13 preferences at the fourth permanency hearing.

14 The Termination of Parental Rights Trial

15 {48} The termination of parental rights trial was held over three days: April 1, 2013, 16 April 24, 2013, and May 17, 2013. On April 24, 2013, Mother relinquished her 17 parental rights and the trial proceeded as to Father's rights. At the trial, the 18 Department permanency planning worker reported that T.J. was thriving in the home 19 where she was placed, that she was excelling in school and was involved in

1 extracurricular activities, but that R.J. and C.J. were experiencing behavioral 2 difficulties and had been placed in treatment foster care. The permanency planning 3 worker also reported that Children were maintaining their cultural ties, T.J. was 4 attending NACA and was involved in their dance club, and the treatment foster 5 parents were reading books to R.J. and C.J. to help them learn about their culture.

6 {49} The permanency planning worker testified that she had maintained contact with 7 the Navajo Nation with regard to Children's placements. She stated that the 8 Department had continued its efforts to identify and locate suitable homes for 9 placement, but that the relatives who had been identified as of the date of the 10 termination hearings had been unwilling or unable to provide a suitable placement for 11 Children. She explained that home studies had been initiated with relatives; however, 12 the relatives had withdrawn from the process. The permanency planning worker 13 reported that no Navajo or other Native American placements had been identified but 14 that the Department was continuing to work with the Navajo Nation to locate other 15 relatives or potential placements.

16 {50} A Department employee, who assisted Aunt during the home study process, 17 testified about the Department's attempts to license Aunt as a foster placement for 18 Children. In June 2011 Aunt contacted the Department to be considered as a potential 19 placement. Aunt completed the Relative, Adoptive, Foster Parent Training (RAFT),

1 a four day training class required for foster placement licensing. The Department 2 requires foster parents and members of foster families over the age of seventeen to 3 complete RAFT training as part of the home study process. The Department initiated 4 a home study; however, Aunt's mother became very ill and Aunt withdrew from the 5 process in August 2011. At that time interviews with family members, which were 6 needed to complete the home study, had not been conducted.

7 {51} Aunt contacted the Department again in December 2011 and the Department 8 started the home study process again. In February 2012, Aunt's mother was 9 hospitalized and Aunt withdrew from consideration as a placement for Children in 10 order to care for her. In November 2012, Aunt contacted the Department and asked 11 to be considered a third time. The Department advised Aunt that her son would be 12 interviewed and required to participate in the RAFT training. Aunt informed the 13 Department that her son would not cooperate.

14 {52} On November 26, 2012, the Department sent Aunt a letter advising that the 15 requested interviews and RAFT training were required by policy, and requested that 16 Aunt contact the Department by December 3, 2012, to confirm her son's participation 17 and avoid Aunt being withdrawn from consideration a third time. Aunt called the 18 Department and stated that her son would attend RAFT training scheduled for 19 December 1, 2012; however, her son did not attend the training. Aunt later reported

1 to the Department that her son would not cooperate either with an interview or with 2 the training. The Department informed Aunt that it would have to withdraw Aunt 3 from consideration again.

4 {53} The Department's home study worker explained that the purpose of the home 5 study is to make sure that Children are placed in a safe home and that the people in 6 the home are able to handle Children's behaviors and provide a safe and nurturing 7 environment. She stated that the son's participation was a critical part of the home
8 study because he would share a room with R.J. and C.J., who had been traumatized, 9 and the son needed to know how to interact with Children efficiently and helpfully.
10 According to the home study worker, the son had not lived with small children in the 11 home before and the Department wanted to equip him with skills that would help him 12 interact with Children.

13 {54} Aunt was present and testified at the termination trial. She stated that when she 14 withdrew from consideration the third time, interviews with the members of her 15 household had not yet been completed, there had not been a report from her son's 16 school, and she had not provided the Department with copies of her income tax 17 documents as requested. However, Aunt indicated that she was still willing to provide 18 a home for Children and that her son was now willing to take the required classes.

1 {55} The QEW also testified at the termination trial. She stated that the Navajo 2 Nation was in support of the termination of parental rights because Father had not 3 been able to complete his service plan and had not demonstrated that he was able to 4 parent Children without substance abuse or domestic violence, neither of which was 5 acceptable in the Navajo culture. The QEW testified that returning Children to Father 6 would result in serious emotional or physical harm to Children and that Children, who 7 had been in custody for about two years, needed permanency.

8 {56} As to Children's placement, the QEW reported that the Department conferred 9 with the Navajo Nation when it was changing Children's temporary placement, and 10 that the Navajo Nation approved Children's temporary placements because the 11 Department did not have an ICWA-compliant placement. The QEW testified that she 12 was aware of the Department's efforts to qualify Aunt as a relative placement for 13 Children. It was her understanding that the last time Aunt was being considered as a 14 relative placement, she did not want to take all three Children, only T.J. She also 15 reported that the Navajo Nation attempted to find a family for placement, but that 16 possible placements were too far from Father and Mother to allow them to maintain 17 a parent-child relationship with Children.

18 {57} The QEW further testified that the Department had made active efforts to locate 19 other Navajo and other Native American families for temporary placement, and that

1 the Navajo Nation believed that there was good cause to deviate from the ICWA
2 preferences for Children's temporary placements. She also reported that the Navajo
3 Nation had given approval to open up a nationwide search for an ICWA preferred 4 home suitable for permanent placement.

5 {58} The district court announced that it would grant the Department's motion to 6 terminate Father's parental rights. The court pointed out that since the Navajo Nation
7 had not yet approved a final, adoptive placement for Children, the issue of placement 8 of Children was ongoing and Aunt was still a potential placement.

9 Motion for Reconsideration

10 {59} Father filed a motion to reconsider ruling on May 28, 2013, and the hearing on 11 that motion was held on August 1, 2013. Father argued that it was a violation of his 12 due process rights to allow the Department's policy that seventeen-year-olds take the 13 foster parent classes to override the ICWA's active efforts requirement to not break 14 up the family, which included extended family. The district court denied Father's 15 motion based on the information and testimony in the record, including the testimony 16 of the QEW that the Department had made active efforts to prevent the breakup of the 17 Indian family.

18 {60} The court asked the Department to make efforts to help Aunt comply with the 19 licensing requirements and to actively engage Aunt's son to participate in the classes.

1 The Department indicated that after the May 17, 2013, hearing, the Department had 2 been attempting to re-engage Aunt in the process and that they had been unable to 3 reach her, but that the door was definitely open.

4 The Fifth Permanency Hearing

5 {61} On August 26, 2013, the court held a fifth permanency hearing. We consider 6 the district court's determination of good cause to deviate from the ICWA placement
7 preferences at this hearing because at the time, Father's parental rights had not yet 8 been terminated. Although the district court had announced its intention to grant the 9 Department's motion to terminate Father's parental rights at the conclusion of the 10 termination trial in May 2013, Father was not divested of his parental rights, and 11 thereby his interest in Children's placement, until the district court's judgment 12 terminating Father's parental rights was filed in October 2013. See State v.
13 Lohberger, 2008-NMSC-033, ¶ 20, 144 N.M. 297, 187 P.3d 162 ("Informal 14 expressions of a court's rulings are not appealable final orders or judgments. For 15 example, a trial court's oral announcement of a result is not final, and parties to the 16 case should have no reasonable expectation of its finality."); see also Bouldin v.
17 Bruce M. Bernard, Inc., 1967-NMSC-155, ¶ 3, 78 N.M. 188, 429 P.2d 647 ("[A]n 18 oral ruling by the trial judge is not a final judgment. It is merely evidence of what the

1 court had decided to do—a decision that the trial court can change at any time before 2 the entry of a final judgment.”).

3 {62} At the fifth permanency hearing, the Department reported that T.J. was doing
4 well in her foster placement, and that R.J. and C.J. continued to require treatment
5 foster care as well as intensive therapeutic treatment. The Department also reported 6 that Aunt had been visiting Children, but that she had been telling Children things 7 about their parents that were upsetting Children. The Department informed the court 8 that it had attempted to engage Aunt in a fourth home study, that Aunt had not fully 9 participated in the home study, and that Aunt withdrew from the process a fourth time 10 because she did not feel like it was “fair to her son.”

11 {63} The QEW indicated that she had not ruled out the Navajo Nation’s adoption 12 unit as to any potential placements, and that she was exploring Children’s maternal 13 relatives for possible placement options. The QEW reported that the Navajo Nation 14 supported Children’s current placement where they were receiving treatment for their 15 special needs. The QEW also stated that T.J. has a say in her adoptive placement, and 16 that the QEW supported T.J.’s decision.

17 {64} The district court found that the ICWA placement preferences had not been 18 followed; however, good cause existed for deviating from the placement preferences 19 because no relative, no Navajo, and no Indian homes had been identified and

1 approved for placement. We conclude the district court appropriately found there was 2 good cause to deviate from the placement preferences.

3 Judgment Terminating Father's Parental Rights

4 {65} The district court filed its judgment terminating Father's parental rights on 5 October 29, 2013. In its judgment, the district court found that the Department had 6 made active efforts to comply with the ICWA placement preferences, that the 7 Department had proven that good cause existed to deviate from the preferences, and 8 that the Navajo Nation concurred with the placement under the circumstances.

9 {66} We conclude that the district court's findings that good cause existed
10 throughout this case to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences were supported 11 by sufficient evidence. As noted earlier, the applicable standard was not before this 12 Court, but the district court's findings would have been appropriate no matter what 13 standard was applied. For purposes of the BIA Guidelines, we note that the 14 Department made consistent efforts to honor Mother's and Father's request that Aunt 15 be considered as a placement for Children; the Department and the Navajo Nation, 16 working in conjunction, were unable to find an available ICWA preferred placement 17 for Children; and the Department demonstrated that Children's cultural, physical, 18 mental, and emotional needs were being addressed through Children's treatment 19 plans, despite the unavailability of ICWA preferred placements.

1 {67} It is also significant that the Navajo Nation did not object to Children’s 2 placement at any point during the case. The Navajo Nation never expressed concern 3 that Children’s cultural, physical, emotional, and psychological needs were not being 4 met by their treatment plans. It is also significant that the QEW recognized that, with 5 regard to Children’s foster care placements, good cause existed to deviate from the 6 ICWA preferred placements.

7 Relative Placement Under New Mexico Law

8 {68} New Mexico law expresses a preference that any child subject to the New 9 Mexico Abuse and Neglect Act be placed with relatives, whether or not the child’s 10 case falls under the ICWA. See § 32A-4-25.1(D) (“[T]he court shall determine 11 whether the [D]epartment has made reasonable efforts to identify and locate all 12 grandparents and other relatives. The court shall also determine whether the 13 [D]epartment has made reasonable efforts to conduct home studies on any appropriate 14 relative expressing an interest in providing permanency for . . . [Children]. The court 15 must ensure the consideration has been given to . . . [Children]’s familial identity and 16 connections.”); see also 8.10.3.16(F) NMAC (3/31/2010) (amended 2/29/2012) (the 17 Department “shall make every effort to identify, locate[,] and notify fit and willing 18 relatives for consideration of placement of a child in custody who requires out of 19 home placement”); 8.10.7.17(A) NMAC (3/31/2010) (“[The] department shall

1 exercise due diligence to identify and notify adult relatives of a child’s removal
2 within thirty . . . days of the removal. The notice shall inform relatives of their option 3 to become a placement resource for the child.”).

4 {69} To the extent that Father argues that the Department failed to make reasonable 5 efforts to identify, locate, and conduct home studies on willing and appropriate 6 relatives who could potentially serve as placement for Children, as required by 7 Section 32A-4-25.1(D) and the related regulations, we conclude the Department’s 8 efforts to place Children with relatives, as outlined above, were sufficient to satisfy 9 those requirements.

10 Due Process

11 {70} We note that Father does not challenge the sufficiency of the evidence to 12 support the termination of his parental rights. Instead, Father claims that the 13 Department’s failure to place Children with relatives or non-relative Indian families 14 violated his substantive and procedural rights to due process. Father argues that his 15 substantive due process rights were violated when the Department failed to place
16 Children with Aunt, in violation of the ICWA, and thus he was deprived of his right 17 to maintain a familial relationship with his children. Father also contends that the 18 district court denied him procedural due process by entering a judgment terminating

1 his parental rights in the absence of full procedural compliance with the placement
2 preferences for Indian children under New Mexico law and the ICWA.

3 {71} Because we have concluded that the district court’s findings that good cause 4 existed throughout this case to deviate from the ICWA placement preferences were 5 supported by sufficient evidence, and that the Department’s efforts to place Children 6 with relatives were sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the New Mexico Abuse 7 and Neglect Act, Father’s substantive due process argument fails.

8 {72} Father further argues that the Department wrongly interfered with Father’s 9 pursuit of his familial relationship with Children by failing to make active efforts to 10 place Children with Aunt. Prior to termination of parental rights Father did have a 11 substantive due process right in a relationship with Children. See Santosky v. Kramer, 12 455 U.S. 745, 753 (1982). However, we concluded that whether the Department 13 made active efforts to prevent the breakup of the family is not an issue in this appeal.
14 Consequently, Father’s argument fails.

15 {73} Once his parental rights were terminated, he no longer had that legal right to 16 a continuing familial relationship with Children. See § 32A-4-29(L) (stating 17 “termina[tion of] parental rights divests the parent of all legal rights and privileges 18 and dispenses with both the necessity for the consent to or receipt of notice of any 19 subsequent adoption proceeding concerning the child[ren]”).

1 {74} Father’s procedural due process claim is also based on the Department’s foster
2 care placement of Children in non-Indian homes. “[P]rocess is due when a proceeding
3 affects or interferes with the parent-child relationship.” State ex rel. Children, Youth 4 & Families Dep’t v. Maria C., 2004-NMCA-083, ¶ 24, 136 N.M. 53, 94 P.3d 796.
5 Whether a parent was afforded due process in abuse and neglect proceedings is a 6 question we review de novo. *State ex rel. Children, Youth & Families Dep’t v.
7 Kathleen D.C.*, 2007-NMSC-018, ¶ 11, 141 N.M. 535, 157 P.3d 714. Procedural due 8 process rights are implicated when a person has been denied “notice and an 9 opportunity to be heard at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner.” State ex 10 rel. Children, Youth & Families Dep’t v. Christopher B., 2014-NMCA-016, ¶ 6, 316
11 P.3d 918 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Because Father’s claim 12 relied on the Department’s placement of Children during the pendency of the neglect 13 proceedings, rather than his notice of and opportunity to participate in the termination 14 proceedings, the argument fails. We hold Father’s procedural due process rights were 15 not violated.

16 Fair and Impartial Proceedings

17 {75} Father contends that he was denied fair and impartial termination proceedings
18 because the district court judge presiding over Father’s termination proceedings failed 19 to recuse himself when Children were placed in the foster home of a judge serving

1 within the same judicial district. Father acknowledges that this issue was not 2 preserved. Nonetheless, Father urges this Court to address the issue, claiming that it 3 affects Father’s fundamental right to a fair and impartial hearing. See Rule 12-4 216(B)(2) NMRA (“This rule shall not preclude the appellate court from considering 5 . . . questions involving . . . fundamental error or fundamental rights of a party.”).

6 {76} The first step in reviewing for fundamental error is to determine whether an 7 error occurred. Campos v. Bravo, 2007-NMSC-021, ¶ 8, 141 N.M. 801, 161 P.3d 846.
8 If error has occurred, we then consider whether the error was fundamental. Id. Father 9 bases his claim that he was deprived of fair and impartial proceedings, on Rule 21-10 211(A) NMRA, which requires that a judge “disqualify himself or herself in any 11 proceeding in which the judge’s impartiality might reasonably be questioned.” Id.
12 Father argues that it could appear that the judge presiding over Father’s case might 13 consider the impact on his colleague if the district court judge removed Children from 14 the colleague’s foster home to place them with Aunt. However, the district court 15 judge typically does not determine placement when a child is in the legal custody of 16 the Department. See NMSA 1978, § 32A-1-4(O) (2009) (defining “legal custody” as 17 “a legal status created by order of the court . . . that vests in a person, department or 18 agency the right to determine where and with whom a child shall live” (internal 19 quotation marks omitted)). The suggestion that the district court judge’s impartiality

1 could be reasonably questioned, based solely on the fact that he and one of Children’s 2 temporary foster parents sat concurrently as judges for the same district, is 3 insufficient to require recusal. See Roybal v. Morris, 1983-NMCA-101, ¶ 7, 100 N.M.
4 305, 669 P.2d 1100 (“Suspicion of bias or prejudice is not enough to disqualify a 5 judge.”). We conclude that the district court judge did not err in not recusing himself.

2 {79} I concur in the result of the majority opinion. I write separately because I would 3 take a different path in affirming the district court.

4 {80} The nature of the case on appeal is significant. Father appeals the district
5 court’s judgment terminating his parental rights to Children. In his request for relief
6 in his brief in chief, Father specifically asks this Court to reverse the order 7 terminating those rights, in addition to requesting an order requiring the Department 8 to place Children with his relatives. The majority states that Father appealed, not in 9 order to restore his parental rights, but to require the Department to place Children 10 with Aunt or, alternatively, any interested relative. Majority Opinion ¶¶ 1, 7. The 11 majority therefore focuses its analysis on the foster care placement of Children prior 12 to termination of Father’s parental rights. Majority Opinion ¶ 8. But regardless of 13 Father’s stated purposes that underlie his request as characterized by the majority, I 14 consider Father’s appeal to be inextricably linked to the proceeding to terminate his 15 parental rights pursuant to the ICWA.

16 {81} A termination of parental rights proceeding is fundamentally different from a 17 foster care placement proceeding under the ICWA. “Foster care placement” means 18 “any action removing an Indian child from its parent or Indian custodian for 19 temporary placement . . . where the parent or Indian custodian cannot have the child

1 returned upon demand, but where parental rights have not been terminated[.]” 25 2 U.S.C. § 1903(1)(i) (emphasis added). A “termination of parental rights” means “any 3 action resulting in the termination of the parent-child relationship[.]” 25 U.S.C.
4 § 1903(1)(ii) (internal quotation marks omitted). By their own terms, “a foster care
5 placement proceeding seeks to temporarily remove an Indian child from the child’s 6 parent or Indian custodian without terminating parental rights, while a termination of 7 parental rights proceeding seeks to end the parent-child relationship.” Thompson v.
8 Fairfax Cnty. Dep’t of Family Servs., 747 S.E.2d 838, 853 (Va. Ct. App. 2013)
9 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted). Father did not seek an 10 interlocutory appeal with regard to any foster care placement of Children. Because 11 Father’s appeal arises from a termination of parental rights proceeding, our inquiry 12 into Father’s claims must necessarily focus on the allowable grounds upon which 13 Father may invalidate the termination of his parental rights under the ICWA.<sup>1</sup>

14 {82} The ICWA contains a statutory provision that provides recourse to a parent 15 whose parental rights to an Indian child have been terminated. That provision states:

---

16 <sup>1</sup> Father also argues that the Department failed to comply with the Abuse and 17 Neglect Act in its placement of Children, but Father does not raise the question of 18 CYFD’s compliance with the Abuse and Neglect Act with regard to the termination 19 of his parental rights. Nevertheless, the Abuse and Neglect Act provides that “[t]he 20 termination of parental rights involving a child subject to the federal [ICWA] shall 21 comply with the requirements of that act.” Section 32A-4-28(E).

1 Any Indian child who is the subject of any action for foster care
2 placement or termination of parental rights under [s]tate law, any parent 3 or Indian custodian from whose custody such child was removed, and 4 the Indian child’s tribe may petition any court of competent jurisdiction 5 to invalidate such action upon a showing that such action violated any 6 provision of [25 U.S.C. §§] 1911, 1912, and 1913 of this title.

7 25 U.S.C. § 1914. As a threshold matter, the plain language of this remedial provision 8 only provides a cause of action for violations of three sections of the ICWA. Section 9 1914 does not allow a parent to challenge a termination of parental rights upon a 10 showing that the termination violated the ICWA’s placement preferences enumerated 11 in 25 U.S.C. § 1915. Accordingly, I conclude that 25 U.S.C. § 1914 controls our 12 review of Father’s appeal, and we cannot reverse the district court’s judgment only 13 upon a showing that Children’s foster care placement violated the ICWA’s placement 14 preferences. Other jurisdictions have considered this question and also have 15 concluded that the provisions of 25 U.S.C. § 1914 do not apply to violations of 16 Section 1915. See Doe v. Mann, 285 F.Supp.2d 1229, 1241 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (“[I]t
17 seems clear from the text of [25 U.S.C. §] 1914 that Congress intended to provide a 18 cause of action only for violations of three ICWA sections.”); see also B.R.T. v. Exec.
19 Dir. of Soc. Serv. Bd., 391 N.W.2d 594, 601 (N.D. 1986) (stating that petition or 20 motion challenging “order terminating parental rights . . . is an improper vehicle for 21 challenging the alleged violation of the placement preferences mandated by [25 22 U.S.C. Section 1915].”); In the Interest of J.W., 528 N.W.2d 657, 662 (Iowa Ct. App.

1 1995) (“The remedial provisions of [25 U.S.C. §] 1914 do not apply to violations of 2 [25 U.S.C. §] 1915.”); State ex rel. Juvenile Dep’t of Multnomah Cnty. v. Woodruff,
3 816 P.2d 623, 625 (Or. Ct. App. 1991) (“Failure to comply with the foster care
4 placement preferences in § 1915(b) is not a basis for invalidating a court order 5 terminating parental rights.”). Therefore, I disagree with the majority that we can 6 reach the issue of Children’s placement in this case.

7 {83} It does seem that, theoretically, Father could have raised the issue of Children’s 8 placement under 25 U.S.C. § 1914 by alleging a violation of the “active efforts” 9 requirement outlined in 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d). In other words, Father could have 10 posited that CYFD’s failure to follow the ICWA’s placement preferences impacted 11 his ability to meet the requirements of the Department’s remedial services and 12 rehabilitative programs, thus constituting a failure by CYFD to engage in “active 13 efforts . . . designed to prevent the breakup of the Indian family.]” 25 U.S.C.
14 § 1912(d). The district court, in its judgment terminating Father’s parental rights, 15 found “that the Department has made active efforts to comply with the preferences 16 . . . [and] the active efforts requirement [of Section 1912(d)] does not apply to 17 extended family[.]” Our courts have not decided whether a failure to engage in 18 “active efforts” may serve as a basis for invalidating a termination of parental rights 19 judgment under the ICWA, but that question is not before us here. Father does not

1 directly attack the district court’s finding or raise a specific argument that the “active 2 efforts” requirement of 25 U.S.C. § 1912(d) applies to both his extended family and 3 compliance with the ICWA’s placement preferences pursuant to 25 U.S.C. § 1915.
4 The majority also notes that CYFD’s “active efforts” are not at issue in this appeal, 5 albeit for slightly different reasons, because Father did not adequately raise the issue.
6 Majority Opinion ¶ 15.

7 {84} Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons, I would affirm the district court’s 8 judgment due to Father’s failure to state an adequate basis under the ICWA for 9 invalidation of the termination of his parental rights.
