1 OPINION

2 SUTIN, Judge.

3 {1} In this appeal, we must construe a statute proscribing the sending of forbidden 4 “obscene images” to a child under sixteen years of age by means of an “electronic 5 communication device.” See NMSA 1978, § 30-37-3.3 (2007). Defendant Robert 6 George Tufts was convicted under the statute based on his having hand-delivered 7 such images contained on an SD (secure digital) or memory card to a fifteen-year-old.
8 We hold that the statute was not intended to cover Defendant’s act.

9 BACKGROUND

10 {2} Child met Defendant in about October or November 2011. Defendant, in his 11 late thirties, gave Child at least two cell phones over several months, and they texted 12 or talked to each other daily on these cell phones. Later in their relationship, during 13 which the two had not engaged in a physical relationship, nor had Defendant made 14 any advances, Defendant removed the SD card from a cell phone, recorded himself 15 nude and masturbating, and he placed the SD card back in the cell phone and handed 16 the phone to Child. The SD card also contained photographs of an adult penis.

17 {3} The police were made aware that Child had received the images. After 18 interviewing Child, the police called Defendant and asked him to come to the police 19 station. Defendant went to the station on his own, and the police interviewed him.

1 Police testimony at trial indicated that, in the interview, Defendant admitted his 2 actions and consented to a search of his and Child’s cell phones. Defendant stated that 3 he was in love with Child and that his behavior was out of character but he felt 4 compelled to do as he did because God sent this relationship to him. Also in the 5 interview, Defendant admitted to the interviewing officer that he knew “that it was 6 wrong.” When asked by the officer why he thought that, Defendant stated that he had 7 “looked it up[,]” and he admitted that sending photos and the video was “against the 8 law.”<sup>1</sup>

9 {4} The law enforcement officer, who conducted a forensic evaluation of the SD 10 card and of the at-issue cell phones, one that belonged to Child and the other that 11 belonged to Defendant, testified that his findings were consistent with Defendant’s 12 admission that Defendant had transferred the images onto an SD card and then placed 13 it in the phone that he gave to Child. The officer further testified that the at-issue 14 images were not transferred through the cell phone network and confirmed that “no 15 one hit a send button” to transmit the images electronically.

16 <sup>1</sup> The trial record is not clear whether Defendant’s research occurred before he 17 handed the SD card to Child or afterward. Further, Defendant contends on appeal that 18 this interview constituted a custodial interview requiring Miranda admonitions and 19 that his statements and the evidence acquired from the statements should have been 20 suppressed. He moved to suppress before trial, and the district court denied the 21 motion. Because we reverse on the ground that the statute under which Defendant 22 was convicted did not cover his conduct, we do not reach the suppression issue.

1 {5} Defendant was indicted on April 1, 2012, charged with one count of violating 2 Section 30-37-3.3, a fourth degree felony, which reads, in part, as follows:

3 Criminal sexual communication with a child consists of a person 4 knowingly and intentionally communicating directly with a specific 5 child under sixteen years of age by sending the child obscene images of 6 the person's intimate parts by means of an electronic communication 7 device when the perpetrator is at least four years older than the child.

8 {6} The term "electronic communication device" is defined in Section 30-37-9 3.3(C)(1) as: "a computer, video recorder, digital camera, fax machine, telephone, 10 pager[,] or any other device that can produce an electronically generated image[.]"

11 {7} At the close of the State's case, Defendant moved for a directed verdict on the 12 ground that his conduct was not covered by the statute. The district court denied 13 Defendant's motion, and Defendant was then convicted of violating Section 30-37-14 3.3, followed by a judgment and sentence of the district court. Defendant was 15 sentenced to a term of eighteen months followed by one year parole. The court 16 required Defendant to serve 146 days of his sentence in the custody of the Doña Ana 17 County Detention Center as time served, but Defendant received pre-sentence 18 confinement credit for those days; and the court suspended the remainder of the 19 sentence (one year, thirty-six days) to be followed by probation.

1 DISCUSSION

2 {8} Defendant contends on appeal that Section 30-37-3.3(A) does not cover his 3 conduct, because he was not “communicating” with Child “by sending” the images 4 “by means of an electronic communication device.” This case requires us to construe 5 Section 30-37-3.3. As stated in State v. Office of the Public Defender ex rel.
6 Muqqddin, 2012-NMSC-029, ¶ 13, 285 P.3d 622,

7 statutory construction is a matter of law we review de novo. Our primary 8 goal is to ascertain and give effect to the intent of the Legislature. In 9 doing so, we examine the plain language of the statute as well as the 10 context in which it was promulgated, including the history of the statute 11 and the object and purpose the Legislature sought to accomplish. We 12 must take care to avoid adoption of a construction that would render the 13 statute’s application absurd or unreasonable or lead to injustice or 14 contradiction.

15 (Alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted.)

16 {9} The law enforcement officer who conducted the interview of Defendant stated 17 at trial that an SD card is a “base digital storage device” and that “[y]ou can plug it 18 into a computer using an adapter and store files on it just like you would on a thumb 19 drive or an external hard drive.” Further, as to the meaning of the term “sending,” 20 calling on the many and varied dictionary definitions of “send” and the context of the 21 statute, the State argues on appeal that the statute’s plain language is not limited to 22 material sent by email or text over a network. And the State argues that the plain and 23 broad reach of the statute’s references to electronic communication devices is meant

1 to “include several devices that are not, or are not necessarily, vehicles for 2 transmitting images (such as images of intimate parts) over a network.” According 3 to the State, by its open-ended “any other device” language “[i]n the context of a 4 statute addressing fast-developing technologies, it can be inferred that the 5 [L]egislature contemplated that electronic communication devices would continue to 6 evolve and be developed[] and that the [L]egislature intended to broadly include all 7 manner of electronic communication devices within the scope of [the statute].”

8 {10} From this reasoning, the State concludes and argues that the statute was 9 intended to cover SD cards used to facilitate sending or transmitting an image even 10 when the image is not sent over the network and that “[t]he fact that an image was in 11 a storage device at some point in the chain between its creation and its receipt by 12 [Child] does not negate the fact [that] it was sent to [Child] in violation of [Section] 13 30-37-3.3.”

14 {11} Countering an argument by Defendant that emphasizes distance, the State 15 argues that there is no significant difference between Defendant sitting next to Child 16 and handing the SD card to her, and Defendant sitting next to Child and transmitting 17 the material via his cell phone with the SD card in it to her cell phone. And 18 discounting Defendant’s argument that the social evil at hand is anonymous-distance

1 transmission to escape detection, the State argues that nothing in the statute indicates 2 any exception in that regard.

3 {12} The State’s argument goes beyond the intended coverage of the statute. The SD 4 card stores or houses images. It was hand delivered. What it contained was not 5 communicated to Child by “sending” the images through an electronic 6 communication device. Section 37-30-3.3(A) is specific and plain enough in its 7 language. The sender must communicate with the minor, and the communication must 8 be made by sending the image by means of an electronic communication device, here 9 a cell phone, used to electronically communicate the image by sending it. Nothing in 10 the context of Section 37-30-3.3(A) and (C)(1) says that hand delivery of an image 11 stored on an SD card which, in turn, is placed in an electronic communication device, 12 is intended to be prohibited.

13 {13} The act of delivery by Defendant is pretty clearly covered under another 14 statute. NMSA 1978, Section 30-37-2(A) (1973) outlaws delivering or providing a 15 minor with images such as those contained on the SD card. The statute reads, in part:

16 It is unlawful for a person to knowingly sell, deliver, distribute, display 17 for sale[,] or provide to a minor . . . any picture, photograph, drawing, 18 sculpture, motion picture film[,] or similar visual representation or 19 image of a person or portion of the human body, or any replica, article[,] 20 or device having the appearance of either male or female genitals which 21 depicts nudity, sexual conduct, sexual excitement[,] or sado-masochistic 22 abuse and which is harmful to minors[.]

1 A person violating Section 30-37-2(A) is guilty of a misdemeanor. NMSA 1978, 2 § 30-37-7(A) (1985). The language of a statute should be construed together with 3 other statutes relating to the same subject matter. State v. Davis, 2003-NMSC-022, 4 ¶ 12, 134 N.M. 172, 74 P.3d 1064 (stating that “statutes in pari materia should be 5 construed together”). Here, Section 30-37-3.3 is part of Article 37 of New Mexico’s 6 criminal statutes. Article 37 relates particularly to “sexually oriented material [that 7 is] harmful to minors.” Section 30-37-2(A), also part of Article 37, clearly covers 8 Defendant’s at-issue conduct in this case.

9 {14} In addition, the Legislature’s use of the term “provide” in Section 30-37-2(A) 10 when read together with the Legislature’s use of the term “sending” in Section 30-37-11 3.3 indicates that the Legislature recognized a distinction between the verbs “to send” 12 and “to provide” in the context of prohibiting adults from sharing depictions of 13 intimate body parts with children. The State’s attempt to blur this distinction by 14 stretching the meaning of “sending” is problematic.

15 {15} The State’s argument runs contrary to the principle of statutory construction 16 that requires courts to attribute the usual and ordinary meaning to words used in a 17 statute. State v. Melton, 1984-NMCA-115, ¶ 16, 102 N.M. 120, 692 P.2d 45. The 18 Oxford Dictionaries defines “send” primarily as “[c]ause to go or be taken to a 19 particular destination; arrange for the delivery of, especially by mail[,]” and 1 secondarily, as “[c]ause (a message or computer file) to be transmitted 2 electronically[.]” Oxford Dictionaries, http://www.oxforddictionaries.com/us/3 definition/american\_english/send (last visited Mar. 6, 2015). The same dictionary 4 defines “provide” primarily as “[m]ake available for use; supply[.]” and secondarily, 5 as “[e]quip or supply someone with[.]” Id. http://www.oxforddictionaries.com 6 /us/definition/american\_english/provide (last visited Mar. 6, 2015). From these 7 definitions and as a matter of common parlance, “to send” when used to describe the 8 act of causing another person to receive a physical object evokes the notion of a third-9 party carrier. On the other hand, the verb “to provide” to describe the act of causing 10 another person to receive a physical object more appropriately, although perhaps not 11 exclusively, describes an in-person exchange.

12 {16} In Muqqddin, our Supreme Court cautioned that “[w]ords are the beginning, 13 not the end; they serve as portals into the thoughts behind the words of a criminal 14 statute.” 2012-NMSC-029, ¶ 54. “Where . . . those thoughts are revealed in another, 15 lesser statute, that becomes a fairly reliable indicator of legislative intent, both as to 16 the specific crime and, more importantly, the gravity of the offense.” Id.; see also 17 Yates v. United States, 574 U.S. ___, 135 S. Ct. 1074, 1081 (2015) (“[T]he plainness 18 or ambiguity of statutory language is determined not only by reference to the 19 language itself, but as well by the specific context in which that language is used[]

1 and the broader context of the statute as a whole.” (alterations, internal quotation
2 marks, and citation omitted)). “Ordinarily, a word’s usage accords with its dictionary
3 definition. In law as in life, however, the same words, placed in different contexts, 4 sometimes mean different things.” Id. at 1082.

5 {17} It is for the Legislature, not this Court, to broaden Section 30-37-3.3’s 6 coverage.

7 It is for the Legislature, not the courts and not the district attorney, to 8 strike the delicate balance between those grave crimes punishable as 9 felonies and those lesser infractions punishable as only misdemeanors.
10 That balance requires value judgments that should be made by the 11 people’s representatives, not judicial officers, under a constitutional 12 system of separation of powers.

13 Muqqddin, 2012-NMSC-029, ¶ 52.

14 CONCLUSION

15 {18} We hold that Defendant was wrongly charged with violation of Section 30-37-16 3.3 and was wrongly convicted and sentenced under that statute. We reverse 17 Defendant’s conviction, judgment, and sentence.

18 {19} IT IS SO ORDERED.
