MEMORANDUM OPINION

17

1 WECHSLER, Judge.

2 [1] Defendant appeals from a corrected order for conditional discharge and 3 probationary supervision, entered after she pled guilty to possession of 4 methamphetamine, reserving the right to challenge the denial of her motion to 5 suppress. We issued a calendar notice proposing to reverse. The State has responded
6 with a memorandum in opposition. Not persuaded, we reverse the district court.

7 {2} In this appeal, Defendant has claimed that the district court erred in denying her motion to suppress. "In reviewing a trial court's denial of a motion to suppress, we 8 observe the distinction between factual determinations which are subject to a 9 10 substantial evidence standard of review and application of law to the facts[,] which is subject to de novo review." State v. Nieto, 2000-NMSC-031, ¶ 19, 129 N.M. 688, 12 11 12 P.3d 442 (alteration in original) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). "We 13 view the facts in the manner most favorable to the prevailing party and defer to the 14 district court's findings of fact if substantial evidence exists to support those 15 findings." State v. Urioste, 2002-NMSC-023, ¶ 6, 132 N.M. 592, 52 P.3d 964.

16 {3} Here, officers were dispatched to a motel based on information that a couple 17 was using drugs in a room. [MIO 2-3, RP 71] Upon arrival, motel staff informed the 18 officers that a male and female were screaming at one another; this information was 19 consistent with information given to dispatch. [RP 71] Officers went to the room, where a male answered the door and stated that his dad was the only other person in the room. The officers then entered the room without consent. [RP 72] The district court determined that the concern for safety of the female in the room justified the warrantless entry under the exigent circumstances exception. [RP 72]

5 Exigent circumstances have been defined as "an emergency situation requiring {4} swift action to prevent imminent danger to life or serious damage to property, or to 6 7 forestall the imminent escape of a suspect or destruction of evidence." Campos v. State, 1994-NMSC-012, ¶11, 117 N.M. 155, 870 P.2d 117 (internal quotation marks 8 9 and citation omitted); see Chavez v. Bd. of Cnty. Comm'rs, 2001-NMCA-065, ¶ 17, 10 130 N.M. 753, 31 P.3d 1027 (observing that law enforcement officers may not make 11 a warrantless entry into a residence unless "exigent circumstances have been shown indicating that immediate action is necessary to prevent imminent danger to life or 12 serious damage to property, to forestall the imminent escape of a suspect, or to prevent 13 14 the destruction of evidence" (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)). Exigent 15 circumstances "must be supported by specific articulable facts" and must be known 16 to the officers prior to entry. State v. Duffy, 1998-NMSC-014, ¶ 70, 126 N.M. 132, 17 967 P.2d 807, overruled in part on other grounds by State v. Tollardo, 2012-NMSC-18 008, ¶ 37 n. 6, 275 P.3d 110. Our calendar notice proposed to hold that exigent circumstances did not exist in this case. 19

1	{5} The State's memorandum in opposition argues that State v. Aragon , 1997-
2	NMCA-087, 123 N.M. 803, 945 P.2d 1021, supports the district court's ruling.
3	However, that case is distinguishable. There, this Court upheld the warrantless entry
4	into a home based on exigent circumstances, where the victim had reported physical
5	abuse earlier in the day, and, after a renewed report of domestic violence, they heard
6	yelling and screaming upon arrival at the residence. Id. \P 18. In contrast, in the present
7	case, there was no information indicating physical abuse or threats of abuse. In
8	addition, the officers did not indicate that they heard any screaming upon arrival at the
9	room. The fact that the male lied to the officers about the presence of a woman in the
10	room did not, without more, indicate that there was imminent danger to her life. As
11	such, we conclude that the officer's warrantless entry into the room was not supported
12	by exigent circumstances.
13	For the reasons set forth above, we reverse.
14	{7} IT IS SO ORDERED.
