17 MEMORANDUM OPINION

18 HANISEE, Judge.

19 {1} Defendant pled no contest to a single charge of criminal sexual contact of a

1 minor in the fourth degree (CSCM) in violation of NMSA 1978, Section 30-9-2 13(D)(1) (2003). Thereafter, Defendant filed a motion to withdraw his plea based on 3 his claim that he had received ineffective assistance of counsel, thereby rendering his 4 plea involuntary and unknowing. The district court denied his motion, and Defendant 5 appealed.

6 {2} Because this is a memorandum opinion and the parties are familiar with the 7 facts and procedural history of the case, we reserve discussion of the pertinent facts 8 for our analysis.

9 DISCUSSION

10 {3} Defendant proffers two possible bases for reversing the district court's denial 11 of his motion to withdraw his plea. First, Defendant contends that his plea could not 12 have been entered knowingly and voluntarily because he received ineffective 13 assistance of counsel. Second, Defendant argues that the district court failed to advise 14 him of the minimum sentence he faced, thus rendering his plea involuntary. We 15 address each of Defendant's arguments in turn.

16 I. Whether Defendant Has Established a Prima Facie Case of Ineffective 17 Assistance of Counsel

18 {4} "The decision of whether a defendant should be permitted to withdraw a plea 19 is discretionary with the trial court; thus, on appeal we review the trial court's ruling 20 to determine whether, under the facts offered in support of the motion, the trial court

1 abused its discretion.” State v. Lozano, 1996-NMCA-075, ¶ 9, 122 N.M. 120, 921 2 P.2d 316. “In this context, a trial court abuses its discretion when it acts unfairly or 3 arbitrarily, or commits manifest error by accepting a plea that is not knowingly and 4 voluntarily given.” State v. Barnett, 1998-NMCA-105, ¶ 12, 125 N.M. 739, 965 P.2d 5 323. “The relevant inquiry is whether [the d]efendant’s plea was voluntary and 6 knowing[.]” State v. Paredes, 2004-NMSC-036, ¶ 5, 136 N.M. 533, 101 P.3d 799.
7 “Where, as here, a defendant is represented by an attorney during the plea process and 8 enters a plea upon the advice of that attorney, the voluntariness and intelligence of the 9 defendant’s plea generally depends on whether the attorney rendered ineffective 10 assistance in counseling the plea.” Barnett, 1998-NMCA-105, ¶ 12.

11 {5} To establish a prima facie claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, the 12 defendant bears the burden of showing both that “(1) ‘counsel’s performance was 13 deficient,’ and (2) ‘the deficient performance prejudiced the defense.’ ” State v.
14 Trammell, 2016-NMSC-031, ¶ 16, 387 P.3d 220 (quoting Strickland v. Washington, 15 466 U.S. 668, 687 (1984)). Where the defendant fails to establish both prongs of this 16 test in the context of a motion to withdraw a plea, the proper course of action is for the 17 district court to deny the motion. See Trammell, 2016-NMSC-031, ¶ 28 (reversing this 18 Court’s reversal of the district court’s denial of the defendant’s motion to withdraw 19 his plea agreement where the defendant had failed to prove that his counsel’s deficient

1 performance prejudiced him and remanding for the district court to enter an order 2 denying the motion).

3 A. Whether Defendant Has Shown That Counsel’s Performance Was 4 Deficient

5 {6} “As to the first prong, counsel’s performance is deficient if it fell below an 6 objective standard of reasonableness.” State v. Turner, 2017-NMCA-047, ¶ 28, 396
7 P.3d 184 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted), cert. denied, 8 2017-NMCERT-___ (No. S-1-SC-36368, Apr. 17, 2017). “There is a strong 9 presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable 10 professional assistance; that is, the defendant must overcome the presumption that, 11 under the circumstances, the challenged action might be considered sound trial 12 strategy.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Appellate courts 13 reviewing ineffective assistance claims “do not second guess defense counsel’s 14 strategic decisions.” Patterson v. LeMaster, 2001-NMSC-013, ¶ 17, 130 N.M. 179, 15 21 P.3d 1032. To determine whether counsel was constitutionally ineffective, we first 16 examine the merits of each of Defendant’s proffered contentions as to how counsel’s 17 performance was deficient. See State v. Hunter, 2006-NMSC-043, ¶ 15, 140 N.M.
18 406, 143 P.3d 168.

19 {7} Here, Defendant argues that counsel’s performance was deficient because 20 counsel failed to do the following: (1) investigate the CSCM charge; (2) file

1 “potentially meritorious pre-trial motions[;]” and (3) advise Defendant of the 2 requirement to register as a sex offender under the Sex Offender Registration and 3 Notification Act (SORNA), NMSA 1978, Sections 29-11A-1 through -10 (1995, as 4 amended through 2013). Thus, Defendant bears the burden of establishing that a 5 reasonably competent attorney would have undertaken the activities that counsel, here, 6 allegedly failed to take. See Hunter, 2006-NMSC-043, ¶ 15. We consider each 7 claimed failure in turn.

8 1. Failure to Investigate

9 {8} Defendant argues that “there were a number of avenues of investigation that 10 trial counsel left unexplored.” Specifically, Defendant contends that counsel’s 11 performance was deficient because he failed to (1) interview the alleged victim, her 12 parents, or the investigating officers, (2) evaluate to what extent the alleged victim’s 13 father’s position as a member of the Alamogordo Police Department “may have 14 influenced the case[.]” and/or (3) “pursue the issue of whether the alleged victim’s 15 safehouse interview had been tainted as a result of her initial questioning by 16 responding officers.”

17 {9} Defendant cites two Tenth Circuit cases—Fisher v. Gibson, 282 F.3d 1283, 18 1291 (10th Cir. 2002), and Coleman v. Brown, 802 F.2d 1227, 1234 (10th Cir.
19 1986)—in support of the proposition that trial counsel’s failure to conduct any

1 investigation is prima facie evidence of deficient performance. However, Defendant 2 fails to offer anything more than recitations of general legal principles from these and 3 other cases, from which he—with no factual context whatsoever—summarily 4 concludes that his attorney’s performance was unreasonable. It is not this Court’s duty
5 to construct Defendant’s arguments on his behalf or to guess at what his arguments 6 may be. See State v. Murillo, 2015-NMCA-046, ¶ 17, 347 P.3d 284 (explaining that 7 where a defendant fails to develop requisite aspects of an argument, this Court “will 8 not construct” an argument for him); State v. Gonzales, 2011-NMCA-007, ¶ 19, 149 9 N.M. 226, 247 P.3d 1111 (stating that “this Court has no duty to review an argument 10 that is not adequately developed”); Headley v. Morgan Mgmt. Corp., 11 2005-NMCA-045, ¶ 15, 137 N.M. 339, 110 P.3d 1076 (“We will not review unclear 12 arguments, or guess at what [a party’s] arguments might be.”).

13 {10} Moreover, the record contains no evidence whatsoever regarding the reasons 14 that trial counsel did not undertake the activities that Defendant now contends were 15 necessary, leaving us both to surmise that there existed no sound strategy for not 16 pursuing certain investigative avenues and to assume that counsel’s failure to 17 investigate was objectively unreasonable. This we will not do. See State v.
18 Arrendondo, 2012-NMSC-013, ¶¶ 38-41, 44, 278 P.3d 517 (explaining that where 19 “the record does not contain any evidence that counsel either intentionally or

1 negligently failed to investigate” allegedly “key evidence[,]” the defendant had failed 2 to establish a prima facie case of ineffective assistance of counsel, leaving the 3 defendant to pursue his claim through habeas corpus proceedings); Turner, 2017-4 NMCA-047, ¶ 28 (explaining that it is the defendant’s burden to overcome the 5 presumption that counsel’s choices are sound trial strategy). Even on appeal, 6 Defendant does nothing more than offer broad generalizations, arguing that 7 “[c]ompetent defense counsel would also be aware that allegations in sexual abuse 8 cases are occasionally fabricated, and fabrication can only be discovered through 9 investigation, including interviews of the people closely associated with the alleged 10 victim.” But nowhere in the record is there any indication that Defendant contended 11 that the alleged victim in this case fabricated her story, in which case trial counsel’s 12 failure to interview anyone in an effort to “nudge” Defendant’s “one stone” (i.e., 13 pursue a plausible defense) arguably might support a claim of ineffective assistance 14 of counsel. Cf. Coleman, 802 F.2d at 1233-34 (concluding that where the defendant 15 “specifically requested before the court that his attorney subpoena” a potential alibi 16 witness and “[i]n light of the strong case against [the defendant] and the seriousness 17 of the charges, it was improper for his attorney to fail to investigate what was perhaps 18 [the defendant’s] sole line of defense”). In other words, Defendant points to no 19 moment in the trial proceeding where it was ever claimed that the accusation against 1 him was not credible and does nothing more than speculate about possible taint in the 2 investigation without pointing to any evidence thereof, we can hardly say that trial 3 counsel’s choice not to investigate those possible defenses constituted deficient 4 performance. We conclude that Defendant has failed to demonstrate that trial 5 counsel’s failure to interview the victim and her family, investigate whether victim’s 6 father “may have influenced the case[,]” and pursue whether victim’s safehouse 7 interview “had been tainted” fell outside the range of reasonable representation.

8 2. Failure to File “Potentially Meritorious Pre-trial Motions”

9 {11} As to this next claimed deficiency, Defendant does nothing more than 10 summarily state that “[c]ounsel’s failure to pursue potentially meritorious pre-trial 11 motions raises substantial questions of ineffective assistance of counsel.” Defendant 12 neither identifies any particular pre-trial motions that counsel should have pursued nor 13 establishes that the facts would have supported the unspecified motions and that a 14 reasonably competent attorney could not have decided that those motions were 15 unwarranted. As such, and because this Court has no duty to review unclear 16 arguments, we conclude that Defendant has failed to meet his burden of showing that 17 this alleged failure rendered counsel’s performance deficient. See Hunter, 2006-18 NMSC-043, ¶ 15 (explaining that the defendant claiming ineffective assistance based 19 on counsel’s failure to file a motion “must establish that the facts support the motion

1 or challenge, and that a reasonably competent attorney could not have decided the 2 motion was unwarranted”); Headley, 2005-NMCA-045, ¶ 15 (explaining that this 3 Court “will not review unclear arguments, or guess at what [a party’s] arguments 4 might be”).

5 3. Failure to Advise Defendant of SORNA Requirement

6 {12} Lastly, Defendant argues that trial counsel’s performance was deficient because 7 he failed to advise Defendant that his no contest plea would carry with it the collateral 8 consequence of having to register as a sex offender under SORNA. The State appears 9 to concede that this constituted deficient performance but argues that Defendant has 10 failed to establish that this “apparent failure” prejudiced him. While we are not bound 11 by the State’s concession, see State v. Neatherlin, 2007-NMCA-035, ¶ 21, 141 N.M.
12 328, 154 P.3d 703, we agree with Defendant that trial counsel’s failure to advise 13 Defendant of the consequences under SORNA amounted to deficient performance.

14 {13} In State v. Edwards, 2007-NMCA-043, ¶ 31, 141 N.M. 491, 157 P.3d 56, this 15 Court held that “defense counsel has an affirmative duty to advise a defendant charged 16 with a sex offense that a plea of guilty or no contest will almost certainly subject the 17 defendant to the registration requirements of SORNA.” We explained that “[p]roper 18 advice will also include a discussion regarding what SORNA registration will mean, 19 both in terms of the specific registration and notification provisions set forth in

1 Sections 29-11A-4, -4.1, -5, -5.1, and -7, as well as the likely social consequences of 2 being a registered sex offender.” Edwards, 2007-NMCA-043, ¶ 31.

3 {14} The record in this case reveals that at Defendant’s change of plea hearing, the 4 district court asked Defendant whether he had been advised by counsel of Defendant’s 5 duty to register as a sex offender under SORNA. When Defendant responded that he 6 had “done [his] own research” and informed the court that counsel had not advised 7 him regarding SORNA, the district court called a recess in order for counsel to “have 8 a conversation with [Defendant] about that.” After a recess lasting less than thirty 9 seconds, the district court again asked Defendant whether counsel had advised him of 10 the registration requirement under SORNA, at which time Defendant responded, “Yes, 11 ma’am.” The district court, upon completing its colloquy, accepted Defendant’s no 12 contest plea, finding it to be voluntarily and knowingly made.

13 {15} While the conversation between counsel and Defendant that occurred during 14 the brief recess is not a matter of record, we have no difficulty concluding as a matter 15 of law that it could not have satisfied the requirement of Edwards. Id. Edwards 16 establishes the “minimum advice” regarding the collateral consequences under 17 SORNA that counsel must provide to a defendant in order to be considered effective.
18 Id. The minimum advice required includes a discussion of five sections of the 19 SORNA, covering (1) registration, including when and where to register, what

1 information must be provided upon registration, when and how to update registration 2 information, disclosing sex offender status to employers, ongoing verification of 3 registration information, and the criminal penalties for noncompliance, see § 29-11A-4 4; (2) procedures when a sex offender moves from New Mexico to another state, see 5 § 29-11A-4.1; (3) how and for how long different registries of sex offenders are 6 maintained, see § 29-11A-5(D)(2); (4) public access to information regarding certain 7 registered sex offenders, see § 29-11A-5.1; and (5) how sex offenders are to be 8 notified of their duty to register, see § 29-11A-7. It further requires a discussion 9 regarding “the likely social consequences of being a registered sex offender.”
10 Edwards, 2007-NMCA-043, ¶ 31. Under the facts of this case, trial counsel could not 11 have properly advised Defendant regarding the registration requirements of SORNA 12 during the very brief recess the district court held in the middle of the change of plea 13 hearing. However, counsel’s deficient performance does not, alone, entitle Defendant 14 to the relief he seeks. Defendant must also prove that counsel’s failure to advise 15 Defendant regarding SORNA resulted in prejudice to Defendant. See id. ¶ 33.

16 B. Whether Defendant Was Prejudiced by Counsel’s Deficient Performance

17 {16} In the context of plea agreements, in order to satisfy the “prejudice” prong of 18 the Strickland test, the defendant must establish that “but for counsel’s errors, he 19 would not have pleaded guilty and instead gone to trial. . . . The question is whether

1 there is a reasonable probability that the defendant would have gone to trial instead 2 of pleading guilty or no contest had counsel not acted unreasonably.” Patterson, 2001-3 NMSC-013, ¶ 18 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). “A reasonable 4 probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome.” Id.
5 “[A] defendant seeking to establish that there is a reasonable probability that he or she 6 would have gone to trial generally must introduce evidence beyond self-serving 7 statements.” Edwards, 2007-NMCA-043, ¶ 35.

8 {17} Here, Defendant argues generally that “there is more than a ‘reasonable 9 probability’ that [Defendant] would have rejected the plea and gone to trial had he 10 been properly advised.” However, he neither offers any explanation as to how 11 counsel’s specific failure to advise him regarding SORNA prejudiced him nor points 12 to any evidence to support the required inference that had counsel fully informed 13 Defendant as required by Edwards, Defendant would have chosen to go to trial instead 14 of pleading. In fact, the record supports the opposite conclusion: that counsel’s failure
15 to advise Defendant regarding SORNA was of no consequence in Defendant’s 16 decision to change his plea. That is because by Defendant’s own admission to the 17 district court, Defendant had conducted his own research regarding SORNA and 18 stated that he “knew” what the registration requirements were. As well, after the 19 conversation both with the district court and his counsel, Defendant at a minimum was 1 aware of his responsibility to register under SORNA yet persisted in his plea, which 2 was then accepted by the district court. While we agree with Defendant that, in light 3 of Edwards, Defendant’s own research into the requirements of SORNA could not be 4 “considered sufficient substitute for the advice and effective representation of 5 counsel[,]” we are satisfied that this evidence supports the conclusion that there is not 6 a reasonable probability that Defendant would have elected to go to trial had counsel 7 adequately advised him of SORNA’s registration requirements. In other words, we 8 conclude that Defendant has failed to establish that he was prejudiced by counsel’s 9 deficient performance.

10 II. Whether the District Court Failed to Properly Advise Defendant of the 11 Penalties He Faced, Thereby Rendering His Plea Involuntary

12 {18} Defendant alternatively urges this Court to conclude that his plea could not have 13 been entered voluntarily and knowingly because the district court failed to comply 14 with its obligations under Rule 5-303(F)(2) NMRA with respect to advising 15 Defendant regarding the minimum sentence he faced by pleading no contest.
16 Defendant misunderstands Rule 5-303(F)(2) and the district court’s obligations 17 thereunder vis-à-vis the particular facts of this case.

18 {19} Rule 5-303(F)(2) provides, in pertinent part, that a district court “shall not 19 accept a plea of . . . no contest without first, by addressing the defendant personally 20 in open court, informing the defendant of and determining that the defendant

1 understands . . . the mandatory minimum penalty provided by law, if any, and the 2 maximum possible penalty provided by law.” (Emphasis added.) Defendant complains 3 that he was never “advised regarding the minimum sentence during the change of plea 4 hearing.” But the particular offense to which Defendant pled—CSCM in the fourth 5 degree—does not contain a mandatory minimum sentence, unlike, for example, 6 CSCM in the second degree. Compare § 30-9-13(B) (providing that “[w]hoever 7 commits [CSCM] in the second degree is guilty of a second degree felony for a sexual 8 offense against a child and, notwithstanding the provisions of [NMSA 1978,] Section 9 31-18-15 [2016] (shall be sentenced to a minimum term of imprisonment of three 10 years, which shall not be suspended or deferred”) (emphasis added)), with §§ 30-9-11 13(D)(2) (providing that “[w]hoever commits [CSCM] in the fourth degree is guilty 12 of a fourth degree felony”) and 31-18-15(A)(13), (B) (providing that “[t]he . . . basic 13 sentence of imprisonment” for a fourth degree felony is eighteen months and granting 14 sentencing courts discretion to alter basic sentences). Thus, we conclude that the 15 district court did not err by failing to inform Defendant of a mandatory minimum 16 sentence where no such penalty existed.

17 CONCLUSION

18 {20} For the foregoing reasons, we affirm the district court’s order denying 19 Defendant’s motion to withdraw his plea.

1 {21} IT IS SO ORDERED.
