17   MEMORANDUM OPINION

18 VANZI, Chief Judge.

19 {1} Defendant John Dominique McDowell appeals his conviction for aggravated 20 battery (deadly weapon), contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-3-5 (A), (C) (1969).

1 Defendant argues that the district court erred by (1) admitting hearsay testimony, 2 (2) denying his motion for mistrial based on improperly admitted testimony, and 3 (3) refusing to instruct the jury regarding eyewitness identification. We affirm.

4 BACKGROUND

5 {2} Defendant and his co-defendant, Joshua Mondragon, were charged with 6 armed robbery, aggravated burglary, and aggravated battery. Sean Ware (Victim)
7 testified at trial as follows. On March 15, 2014, Victim was living with his parents, 8 who were out of town. Early in the morning, Victim was watching television in a 9 chair and dozing with the door unlocked. The door opened, and when Victim 10 stood, he saw Defendant and another man enter the residence. Victim testified that 11 the men were named John and Josh. Victim, who referred to Defendant as 12 “Hollywood,” knew Defendant through a mutual friend and had met him three or 13 four times prior to that morning. Victim did not know Defendant’s last name but 14 knew that his “real” name was John.

15 {3} Defendant first asked Victim where Defendant’s girlfriend was, and then 16 began hitting Victim with brass knuckles while saying “a lot of angry things.”
17 Mondragon also beat Victim with a broom handle and a pool stick. The attackers 18 were in the house for thirty to forty-five minutes. Eventually, Defendant and the 19 other man asked where the keys to a truck that belonged to Victim’s father were 20 located. Victim testified that, although he did not provide the location of the keys,

1 the two men found them and took the truck, along with the television, a DVD
2 player, and Victim's cell phone.

3 {4} Victim was then able to pull himself up from the floor, and as he closed the 4 door, he saw the men pulling away from the house in his father's gold-colored 5 pickup truck, with two women following in a white pickup truck. Victim cleaned 6 himself up and walked about ten blocks to a friend's house to call the police. When 7 officers arrived, Victim identified Defendant as the perpetrator and later again 8 identified Defendant when shown a photograph of Defendant.

9 {5} On cross-examination, Victim admitted that he had used methamphetamine 10 about two days before the attack. He also admitted to selling things in the past to 11 support his methamphetamine habit. Although he could not recall what the 12 attackers were wearing because his memory of the incident was "kind of fuzzy," 13 Victim provided officers the most complete description of his attackers that he 14 could.

15 {6} Also at trial, Officer Daniel Casarez testified that he was dispatched to 16 investigate an abandoned truck in a field. The vehicle was directly across the street 17 from an address where Officer Casarez found Mondragon. The State asked Officer 18 Casarez if anyone else lived at that address, at which point defense counsel 19 objected on hearsay and foundation grounds. The district court ruled that the 20 admissibility of the testimony depended on where the officer "got the 1 information[.]” Officer Casarez then testified that he obtained the information from 2 “our system and previous incidents involving [Defendant].” The State did not ask 3 any follow-up questions about the address, but instead asked about the abandoned 4 vehicle.

5 {7} Defense counsel again objected and requested a mistrial, arguing that Officer 6 Casarez’s testimony referenced previous incidents involving Defendant and law 7 enforcement that were inadmissible. The district court agreed that the testimony 8 was improper but ruled that it did not necessitate a mistrial. Nonetheless, the 9 district court offered a curative instruction, but cautioned that such an instruction 10 likely would draw more attention to the testimony. Defense counsel declined the 11 curative instruction. Following this exchange, Officer Casarez’s testimony related 12 to the abandoned vehicle and how the authorities located the co-defendant at the 13 residence across the street.

14 {8} Ultimately, the jury found Defendant not guilty of armed robbery and 15 aggravated burglary but guilty of aggravated battery. This appeal followed.

16 DISCUSSION

17 {9} Defendant argues on appeal that Officer Casarez provided inadmissible 18 hearsay testimony when he referred to a particular address and implied that 19 Defendant lived there. Defendant additionally argues that the district court erred in 20 denying Defendant’s motion for mistrial relating to Officer Casarez’s reference to 1 Defendant’s previous police interactions. Defendant finally contends that the 2 district court improperly refused to instruct the jury regarding eyewitness 3 identifications. We take each argument in turn.

4 I. The Address-Related Testimony Did Not Constitute Reversible Error

5 {10} While Defendant acknowledges that Officer Casarez “did not directly testify 6 to [Defendant’s] address[,]” he argues that during the exchange between the 7 witness and the State, the “information came in as indirect hearsay, had the same 8 intended effect as if it was testified to directly, and was similarly inadmissible.”
9 Defendant contends the district court erred by permitting this indirect hearsay, 10 lacking foundation.

11 {11} “An evidentiary ruling within the discretion of the court will constitute 12 reversible error only upon a showing of an abuse of discretion and a demonstration 13 that the error was prejudicial rather than harmless.” State v. Smith, 2016-NMSC-14 007, ¶ 46, 367 P.3d 420 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). “We 15 review improperly admitted evidence for non-constitutional harmless error.” State 16 v. Serna, 2013-NMSC-033, ¶ 22, 305 P.3d 936. “[N]on-constitutional error is 17 harmless when there is no reasonable probability the error affected the verdict.” 18 State v. Tollardo, 2012-NMSC-008, ¶ 36, 275 P.3d 110 (internal quotation marks 19 and citation omitted).

20 When assessing the probable effect of evidentiary error, courts 21 should evaluate all of the circumstances surrounding the error. This

1 includes the source of the error, the emphasis placed on the error, 2 evidence of the defendant's guilt apart from the error, the importance 3 of the erroneously admitted evidence to the prosecution's case, and 4 whether the erroneously admitted evidence was merely cumulative.

5 Serna, 2013-NMSC-033, ¶ 23 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

6 {12} We first address whether the district court in fact admitted hearsay testimony 7 pertaining to Defendant's address. Defendant cites out-of-state cases to support his 8 argument that a witness may not offer hearsay evidence in the guise of non-hearsay 9 testimony. The State responds that Officer Casarez did not expressly communicate 10 the contents of any out-of-court statements and that the cases offered by Defendant 11 do not guide our inquiry because the specific hearsay information in those cases 12 was actually communicated to the jury. We agree with the State.

13 {13} Defendant relies on United States v. Check, 582 F.2d 668 (2d Cir. 1978), 14 Mitchell v. Hoke, 745 F. Supp. 874 (E.D.N.Y. 1990), and State v. Broadway, 96-15 2659 (La. 10/19/99), 753 So. 2d 801, in support of his argument that Officer 16 Casarez's testimony was inadmissible hearsay. These cases are all distinguishable.
17 In each case cited by Defendant, the prosecutor used a testifying witness to 18 introduce statements made by a non-testifying witness concerning out-of-court 19 accusations against or identifications of the defendant. See Check, 582 F.2d at 675; 20 Mitchell, 745 F. Supp. at 876; Broadway, 96-2659, pp. 8-9 (La. 10/19/99). In 21 contrast, here, the State did not elicit information about any out-of-court 22 identification, nor did the State extract testimony about the officer's investigation

1 and conversations with informants or witnesses. Rather, the State asked a single, 2 non-leading question: “Do you know who else, if anyone, lived [at the address in 3 question]?” Notwithstanding that defense counsel himself stated during opening 4 remarks that the truck was found across the street from Defendant’s property, 5 counsel objected and the State agreed to lay additional foundation. When Officer 6 Casarez answered that he knew Defendant’s address based on system records and 7 previous interactions, the State then immediately turned to a different line of 8 questioning. Officer Casarez did not testify about Defendant’s address, nor did he 9 imply that Defendant lived at the address at which the co-defendant resided.
10 Defendant can point to no out-of-court statement relayed by Officer Casarez that 11 was offered for the truth of its contents.

12 {14} Even if we were to assume that Officer Casarez’s statements contained 13 impermissible hearsay, reversal is warranted “only if the reviewing court is able to 14 say, in the context of the specific evidence presented at trial, that it is reasonably 15 probable that the jury’s verdict would have been different but for the error.” State 16 v. Barr, 2009-NMSC-024, ¶ 54, 146 N.M. 301, 210 P.3d 198, overruled on other 17 grounds by Tollardo, 2012-NMSC-008, ¶ 37. We can make no such conclusion.
18 The State never mentioned Defendant’s address again at trial. The jury acquitted 19 Defendant of the crimes associated with the truck, i.e., armed robbery and 20 aggravated burglary. Additionally, Defendant’s address had little, if any, bearing

1 on the aggravated battery for which Defendant was convicted or Victim's 2 identification of Defendant, which was based solely on the fact that he knew what 3 his attackers looked like. Even if Officer Casarez's testimony contained 4 impermissible hearsay, the error was harmless because there is no reasonable 5 probability that the inadmissible evidence contributed to Defendant's conviction.
6 Tollardo, 2012-NMSC-008, ¶¶ 36, 43.

7 II. The Trial Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion in Denying Defendant's 8 Motion for Mistrial Based Upon Improper Testimony

9 {15} Defendant objected to Officer Casarez's testimony that he knew Defendant 10 through prior incidents and requested a mistrial based on this improper testimony.
11 The district court offered a curative instruction, although the court cautioned that 12 such an instruction could draw more attention to the improper testimony, and 13 denied Defendant's motion for a mistrial. Defendant argues the district court's 14 denial of his motion for mistrial is erroneous. "We review a trial court's denial of a 15 motion for mistrial under an abuse of discretion standard." State v. Samora, 2013-16 NMSC-038, ¶ 22, 307 P.3d 328 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). As 17 previously stated, where an evidentiary ruling is the basis for the district court's 18 alleged error, we determine whether the non-constitutional error is harmless. See 19 Smith, 2016-NMSC-007, ¶ 46; Serna, 2013-NMSC-033, ¶¶ 22-23; Tollardo, 2012-20 NMSC-008, ¶ 36.

1 {16} Defendant concedes that the offending comment was unsolicited. See State
2 v. Vialpando, 1979-NMCA-083, ¶¶ 23-27, 93 N.M. 289, 599 P.2d 1086 (holding 3 that unsolicited, improper comment did not warrant mistrial). Nor is there any 4 indication in the record that the State mentioned this fact again at trial. See Serna, 5 2013-NMSC-033, ¶ 23. Defendant, instead, argues that the comment was highly 6 prejudicial because the case “came down to whether the jury thought . . . [Victim]
7 and his identification of [Defendant] were more credible than [Defendant’s] 8 mistaken identification defense” and “[t]o paint [Defendant] as someone with a 9 criminal past unfairly undermine[d] his defense.” The jury’s verdict undercuts this 10 contention. Indeed, the comment appears to have had no negative impact on the 11 jury with respect to two of the three charges on which Defendant was acquitted.

12 {17} Finally, the district court offered a curative instruction, which defense 13 counsel declined. “In reviewing inadvertent remarks made by witnesses, generally, 14 the trial court’s offer to give a curative instruction, even if refused by the 15 defendant, is sufficient to cure any prejudicial effect.” Samora, 2013-NMSC-038, ¶
16 22 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Likewise, defense counsel’s 17 refusal of a curative instruction indicates an assessment by counsel that “the slight 18 chance the jury would assume [the defendant had a prior criminal record based on 19 the comment] was not worth the risk of drawing their attention to it by having a 20 curative instruction given.” Smith, 2016-NMSC-007, ¶ 47. Based on the foregoing,

1 especially in light of the lack of any improper motive on behalf of the State, the 2 district court did not abuse its discretion in denying Defendant’s motion for 3 mistrial based on Officer Casarez’s improper comment.

4 III. The District Court Did Not Err in Refusing to Give an Eyewitness
5 Identification Instruction

6 {18} “The propriety of jury instructions is a mixed question of law and fact.”
7 State v. Romero, 2005-NMCA-060, ¶ 8, 137 N.M. 456, 112 P.3d 1113. “[W]e view 8 the evidence in the light most favorable to the giving of the requested 9 instruction[,]” and “[w]ith those facts in mind, we then review the issue de novo.”
10 Id. Defendant contends that he was entitled to an instruction on eyewitness 11 identification because research establishes that eyewitness identifications are 12 unreliable and other jurisdictions have determined that juries should receive 13 guidance from the court about how to consider eyewitness testimony. We conclude 14 that the rejection of a specific instruction on eyewitness identification was not 15 reversible error. See State v. Gallegos, 1993-NMCA-046, ¶ 11, 115 N.M. 458, 853 16 P.2d 160.

17 {19} Although Defendant proposed five jury instructions relating to the State’s 18 burden, witness credibility, and eyewitness accounts, Defendant argues on appeal 19 that it was error for the district court to refuse to give any instruction on eyewitness 20 identification. Defendant proposed an instruction on eyewitness identification 21 modeled after the Tenth Circuit Criminal Pattern Jury Instruction 1.29. After

1 hearing argument from counsel, the district court denied the instruction and ruled 2 that the New Mexico Uniform Jury Instructions (UJIs) were sufficient to address 3 Defendant's concerns. In so ruling, the district court instructed the jury as to 4 witness credibility and reasonable doubt. See UJI 14-5020 NMRA; UJI 14-5060
5 NMRA.

6 {20} Defendant relies on State v. Henderson, 27 A.3d 872 (N.J. 2011), in support 7 of his position that recent research suggests eyewitness testimony is unreliable and 8 that juries do not intuitively understand the vagaries of human memory. In 9 Henderson, the New Jersey Supreme Court focused on the suggestiveness of the 10 eyewitness identification and remanded the case for development of an extensive 11 factual record on the subject. Id. at 877. A special master was appointed who held 12 a hearing at which seven experts testified and hundreds of studies were presented 13 for review. Id. The Henderson court adopted much of the special master's report.
14 Id. at 877, 885-89. Ultimately, the court evaluated the scope and content of the 15 scientific evidence and developed a framework for evaluating identification 16 evidence. Id. at 892-922. The court also charged the jury instruction committee to 17 revise existing eyewitness identification instructions in light of its decision. Id. at 18 925-26.

19 {21} Henderson does not assist our analysis in this case. First, this case is 20 factually distinct from Henderson, since Victim in this case had prior interactions

1 with Defendant and knew him by name. Additionally, unlike Henderson, 2 Defendant does not challenge Victim’s identification of him as overly suggestive.
3 Further, no comparable factual record exists here, nor has any New Mexico court 4 or jury instruction committee been presented with similar evidence and research to 5 evaluate. To the extent Defendant suggests that our uniform jury instructions 6 should be revisited and revised to incorporate the latest research on eyewitness 7 identification, such an undertaking should be done at the direction of our Supreme 8 Court. Cf. Britton v. Boulden, 1975-NMSC-029, ¶ 4, 87 N.M. 474, 535 P.2d 1325.
9 {22} Significantly, as Defendant acknowledges, the New Mexico Supreme Court 10 and this Court have repeatedly found no error when a defendant requests an 11 “eyewitness identification” instruction but the district court chooses instead to 12 instruct the jury with the UJI on evaluating witness credibility. See, e.g., State v.
13 Ortega, 1991-NMSC-084, ¶ 72, 112 N.M. 554, 817 P.2d 1196, abrogated on other 14 grounds as recognized by Kersey v. Hatch, 2010-NMSC-020, ¶ 17, 148 N.M. 381, 15 237 P.3d 683; State v. Haynes, 2000-NMCA-060, ¶ 23, 129 N.M. 304, 6 P.3d 16 1026; Gallegos, 1993-NMCA-046, ¶ 11; see also UJI 14-5020 comm. cmt. (“This 17 instruction, together with the reasonable doubt instruction, UJI 14-5060, makes an 18 instruction on the dangers of eyewitness testimony unnecessary.”). Given this, the 19 district court’s rejection of the eyewitness identification instruction was not 20 reversible error.
