17                           DISPOSITIONAL ORDER OF REVERSAL

18 {1}     This appeal having come before the full Court and each Justice having read the

19 briefs of the parties and otherwise being fully informed on the issues and applicable

1 law as raised and briefed by the parties; and

2 {2} All of the Justices having concurred that there is no reasonable likelihood that 3 a Decision or Opinion would advance the law of the State; and

4 {3} Acting within this Court's discretion under Rule 12-405(B)(3) NMRA to 5 dispose of a case by order, decision or memorandum opinion rather than formal 6 opinion because "[t]he issues are answered by statute or rules of court,"

7 IT IS THEREFORE ADJUDGED THAT:

8 {4} For the reasons that follow, we reverse the Court of Appeals and remand to the 9 district court as provided herein.

10 {5} On March 24, 2009, Defendant and another individual entered James 11 Williamson's home, knocked Mr. Williamson to the ground, proceeded to hit him and 12 hold him down, and stole some of his belongings. At trial, Defendant was convicted 13 of both robbery, under NMSA 1978, Section 30-16-2 (1973), and larceny, under 14 NMSA 1978, Section 30-16-1 (2006), and was sentenced consecutively for the crimes.

15 {6} On appeal to the Court of Appeals, Defendant argued that his convictions for 16 both larceny and robbery under these circumstances violate the constitutional 17 protection of double jeopardy. Relying on this Court's opinion in State v. Bernal, 18 2006-NMSC-050, 140 N.M. 644, 146 P.3d 289, the Court of Appeals held that the 19 convictions did not violate double jeopardy. State v. Polson, No. 31,138, slip op. at

1 3 (N.M. Ct. App. July 12, 2011).

2 {7} We granted certiorari. 2011-NMCERT-009, 269 P.3d 904. In its briefing to 3 this Court, the State concedes that conviction for both larceny and robbery in the 4 context of this case constitutes a clear violation of double jeopardy. We agree and 5 express our appreciation to counsel for the State for his candor.

6 {8} In Bernal, the defendant argued that he could not be convicted of multiple 7 attempted robberies of two victims during the same criminal episode, drawing an 8 analogy to the single-larceny doctrine. 2006-NMSC-050, ¶ 22. The single-larceny 9 doctrine states that if a defendant takes multiple items in one criminal episode, at one 10 time and in one place, then there can be only one larceny. Id. In rejecting the 11 argument that a similar doctrine should apply to robbery, we noted the difference
12 between larceny and robbery, that larceny is primarily a property crime, while robbery 13 is designed to protect the public and punish the use of force required to commit the 14 crime. Id. ¶ 28. Thus, we upheld the attempted robbery conviction at issue in Bernal 15 where the force was directed toward a second victim, even though the criminal 16 (larcenous) intent to steal might have been continuous.

17 {9} In the present case, the Court of Appeals noted this distinction between the 18 purposes of larceny and robbery and then concluded that “Defendant’s double

1 jeopardy rights were not violated.” Polson, No. 31,138, slip op. at 3. The Court of 2 Appeals did not conduct a Blockburger test. The opinion, issued in July 2011, did not 3 have the advantage of referring to our more recent case law refining Blockburger.
4 See State v. Swick, 2012-NMSC-018, 279 P.3d 747; State v. Gutierrez, 2011-NMSC-
5 024, 150 N.M. 232, 258 P.3d 1024; State v. Gallegos, 2011-NMSC-027, 149 N.M.
6 704, 254 P.3d 655.

7 {10} Even without these more recent opinions, however, reliance on Bernal to 8 resolve this case is misplaced. Whereas that opinion was directed towards a unit-of-9 prosecution analysis with multiple robbery victims, and no larceny charge, the case
10 before us is a double-description analysis involving only one victim with both robbery
11 and larceny convictions for essentially the same theft. Without the need for the further 12 refinement of double-description analysis found in our more recent case law, this case
13 begins and ends with Blockburger.

14 {11} Once the conduct underlying multiple crimes has been determined to be unitary,
15 of which there is no dispute in this case, the next step in any double-description,
16 double-jeopardy analysis—even after Swick—is to first conduct a Blockburger test.
17 See Swick, 2012-NMSC-018, ¶ 11. Applying Blockburger to this case, it is clear that 18 convictions for both larceny and robbery do not each require proof of a fact or an

1 element exclusive of the other. The elements overlap, almost entirely. The only 2 element the State must prove that differs between the two crimes is use of force to 3 convict of robbery. Compare Section 30-16-1, with Section 30-16-2.

4 {12} Under the circumstances of this case, larceny is entirely subsumed within the 5 crime of robbery; robbery is simply larceny with the added element of force, thereby 6 making larceny a lesser included offense of robbery for purposes of traditional 7 Blockburger analysis. While the State must also prove the value of the property for 8 a larceny conviction, this element merely determines the gradation of the crime, not 9 whether the crime was committed, and thus should not factor into double-jeopardy
10 analysis. See State v. Lee, 2009-NMCA-075, ¶ 15, 146 N.M. 605, 213 P.3d 509.

11 {13} Accordingly, we vacate Defendant's conviction for larceny, a lesser-included 12 offense of robbery in this case, and remand to the district court for re-sentencing.
