On petitions to review ballot title filed September 8, 2011, considered and under advisement on November 2, 2011.

Gregory A. Chaimov, Davis Wright Tremaine LLP, Portland, filed the petition and reply memorandum for petitioners Girod, Monroe, and Schamp.

James M. Brown, Portland, filed the petition and reply memorandum for petitioner Johnson.

Hobart B. Kytr, pro se, filed the petition and reply memorandum for himself.

Jeff J. Payne, Assistant Attorney General, Salem, filed the answering memorandum for respondent. With him on the memorandum were John R. Kroger, Attorney General, and Mary H. Williams, Solicitor General.

Robert C. Lothrop and John C. Platt, Portland, filed the brief for amicus curiae Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

LANDAU, J.

The ballot title is referred to the Attorney General for modification.

1 LANDAU, J.

2 Petitioners seek review of the Attorney General's certified ballot title for 3 Initiative Petition 21 (2012), arguing that the ballot title does not satisfy the requirements
4 of ORS 250.035(2). We review a certified ballot title to determine whether it 5 substantially complies with those statutory requirements. See ORS 250.085(5) (stating 6 standard of review). For the reasons that follow, we refer the ballot title to the Attorney 7 General for modification.

8 Initiative Petition 21 would amend a number of statutory provisions 9 pertaining to the commercial harvest and sale of salmon from the Oregon portion of the 10 Columbia River. Because those statutes exist as part of a complex web of laws that 11 govern fishing in the Columbia River, we begin with a brief overview of those laws, 12 before proceeding with a summary of the initiative petition itself and the parties' 13 contentions concerning the Attorney General's certified ballot title.

14 The laws that govern fishing in the Columbia River include an interstate 15 compact between Oregon and Washington, Oregon statutes and administrative rules, 16 Washington statutes and administrative rules, federal law, and treaties with Native 17 American tribes. Also, as a result of more than 50 years of litigation over the lawfulness 18 of various Columbia River fishing practices and policies, the federal courts have issued 19 several orders designed to manage the fisheries in accordance with those laws and 20 regulations.

21 Under the terms of the Columbia River Compact (the Compact), Oregon
22 and Washington have "concurrent jurisdiction" over the Columbia River. ORS 507.010.

1 The boundary between the two states is the mid-channel of the river; each state may 2 enforce its own laws on its own side and, if the other state has a similar law, may enforce 3 its law on the other state's side. ORS 186.510-186.520; State v. Catholic, 75 Or 367, 4 383-84, 147 P 372 (1915).

5 The state laws that govern commercial fishing in the Columbia River are 6 numerous. Gillnet fishing is essentially the only method of commercial salmon or 7 sturgeon fishing currently allowed by the law of either state. ORS 508.775; OAR 635-8 042-0010(2)(b); RCW 77.65.160. "Gillnets" are nets with uniformly sized mesh, 9 weighted at the bottom, so that they float in the water and drift with the tide or current.
10 Fish that are smaller than the mesh pass through, while larger fish get stuck in the mesh 11 around their gills. "Tangle nets" are similarly constructed to cause parts of the head or 12 teeth of the fish to become ensnared in the mesh. "Seines" are nets that are also weighted 13 so that they hang vertically, but they have smaller mesh and are generally used to encircle 14 an entire school of fish and are drawn closed around the school, catching everything 15 inside. The use of seines has been illegal in Oregon since 1948, when the voters adopted 16 an initiative banning their use. ORS 509.216 (current statute banning use).

17 Commercial fishing for salmon by boat in the Oregon portion of the 18 Columbia River requires a vessel permit from the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission.
19 ORS 508.775. No more than 200 permits may be issued each year. ORS 508.792.
20 Generally, all current permit holders may renew their permits every year. If a permit 21 holder is denied renewal, ORS 508.796 provides a method of judicial review. If fewer 22 than 200 permit holders renew their permits, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife

1 (ODFW) may hold a lottery to assign the remaining permits to interested applicants.
2 ORS 508.792.

3 Native American rights to fish in the Columbia River were preserved by 4 treaty, and those rights are subject to only limited state regulation; that is, the law allows 5 certain time and manner restrictions for conservation purposes similar to those imposed 6 on other nontribal fisheries. Puyallup Tribe v. Dept. of Game, 391 US 392, 399, 88 S Ct
7 1725, 20 L Ed 2d 689 (1968). The United States District Court for the District of Oregon 8 retains continuing jurisdiction over agreements to enforce those treaty rights. Sohappy v.
9 Smith, 302 F Supp 899, 911 (D Or 1969) (U.S. v. Oregon). The federal district court 10 approved the most recent management plan in August 2008 (commonly known as "the 11 U.S. v. Oregon agreement"). As part of the U.S. v. Oregon agreement, the states of 12 Washington, Oregon, and Idaho; the federal government; and four Native American 13 tribes agreed to extensive rules governing fisheries and the harvest of fish in the 14 Columbia River.

15 Federal law also affects commercial fishing in the Columbia River. As 16 relevant to this petition, the Endangered Species Act regulates the harvesting of some 17 threatened salmonid species. 50 CFR §§ 223.102, 223.203 (2011).

18 Initiative Petition 21 is a seven-page measure comprising 15 sections that, 19 if adopted, would amend a variety of Oregon statutes that address the harvest and sale of 20 salmon from the Oregon side of the Columbia River.

21 Section 1 enumerates a series of findings concerning the current state of the 1 Columbia River wild salmon and steelhead runs. Those findings recite that the 2 commercial use of gillnets and tangle nets has resulted in the dramatic decline of fish 3 populations, that gillnets have been banned in other states because of their destructive and 4 nonselective nature, that practices other than gillnetting exist by which hatchery fish may 5 be selectively harvested, that transitioning from gillnetting to alternative practices will 6 better protect endangered salmon and steelhead, and that transitioning to such alternative 7 practices will restore critical habitats and improve hydroelectric dam operations.

8 Section 2 would amend ORS 508.775 to ban completely the use of gillnet 9 or tangle nets "to take salmon, steelhead, or other fish in the inland waters of the state of 10 Oregon." Additionally, section 2 would prohibit any "wholesaler, canner or buyer" from 11 buying salmon that has been taken "by a gillnet or tangle net from the inland waters of 12 the state of Oregon." Also, section 2 provides an exemption to both of those provisions 13 for persons fishing pursuant to tribal fishing rights.

14 Section 3 would amend ORS 509.216, which currently bans the use of seine 15 nets. Under section 3, ODFW "shall * * * permit the use of seines for the taking of 16 salmon for commercial purposes" to persons who hold a vessel permit on the effective 17 date of Initiative Petition 21. Also, ODFW "may" permit fixed fishing gear for 18 commercial salmon fishing as well. ODFW may issue one net permit for each existing 19 vessel permit; net permits would be renewable each year and transferrable. Section 3 20 also requires the commission to give "due consideration to ensuring" that fishing nets and 21 gear are "designed and used to minimize the mortality" of nontarget fish (like wild 22 salmon and steelhead). Last, section 3 provides, in part, that

1 "(8) In adopting commercial fisheries authorized under this 2 section, the Commission shall:

3 "(a) Comply with the terms of Columbia River fisheries
4 management agreements between the United States, Indian tribes and states
5 [i.e., the U.S. v. Oregon agreement].

6 "(b) Ensure that the percentages of the total state, non-tribal 7 Columbia River salmon harvests, including off channel fishery
8 enhancement areas, that are landed in recreational fisheries in the Columbia 9 River and its tributaries are not reduced below the averages of the 2007-10 2011 fisheries."

11 Section 4 similarly provides that "[t]his 2012 Act does not affect * * * [t]he 12 Columbia River Compact or fishing management agreements between the United States, 13 Indian tribes and states [or] * * * [a]ny tribal fishing rights[.]"

14 Section 5 lists several new definitions, including a definition of Oregon's 15 "[i]nland waters" as, essentially, the entire Columbia River along Oregon's northern 16 border (recall that the Compact says that the border is the middle of the river).

17 Section 6 would remove representatives of the Columbia River gillnet 18 salmon fishing industry from the commission permit board. Sections 7 through 13 would 19 change various internal references. Section 14 would repeal eight statutes, to be replaced 20 by the procedures provided under sections 1 through 13. It also would repeal ORS 21 508.460, which provides that "[a]ll gillnet licenses issued by the States of Oregon and 22 Washington are valid as to the waters of the Columbia River in Oregon and 23 Washington[.]" Section 15 sets an operative date of July 1, 2013.

24 The Attorney General certified the following ballot title for Initiative 25 Petition 21:

1 "Specified commercial non-tribal fishing methods/procedures 2 changed; recreational salmon fishers ensured minimum share of 3 catch

4 "Result of 'Yes' Vote: 'Yes' vote changes commercial non-tribal 5 fishing in Oregon 'inland waters' (defined) by banning gillnets, adopting 6 other regulatory changes; recreational salmon fishers ensured their 7 recent share.

8 "Result of 'No' Vote: 'No' vote continues current commercial 9 fishing practices, retains laws allowing gillnets, leaves other current 10 regulations in place; continues annual adjustment of recreational salmon 11 harvest share.

12 "Summary: Current law allows Columbia River commercial 13 salmon fishing with gillnets; requires annual adjustment of recreational 14 salmon fishers' percentage share of overall catch; allows issuing of 15 gillnet permits within limit of 200; recognizes gillnet licenses as valid in 16 Columbia River in both Oregon/Washington. Measure bans non-tribal 17 gillnet fishing in Oregon 'inland waters' (defined); permits use of 'seine 18 nets' (defined) instead; ensures that recreational salmon fishers' 19 percentage of overall catch remains at 2007-2011 levels; prohibits 20 purchase of salmon caught by gillnet by non-tribal fishers in Oregon 21 inland waters; prohibits issuing additional gillnet permits; no longer 22 recognizes validity of gillnet licenses in Oregon and Washington.
23 Measure may affect Columbia River Compact, tribal fishing rights, and 24 fishing management agreements between federal government, tribes, 25 and states. Other provisions."

26 Four sets of petitioners filed petitions challenging the Attorney General's 27 certified ballot title: (1) Girod, Monroe, and Schamp, who are the chief petitioners of 28 Initiative Petition 21; (2) Cary Johnson, a commercial fisherman; (3) Hobart Kytr, 29 administrator of "Salmon for All," a commercial fishing trade association; and (4) Steven 30 Fick, a fish processor. We have also received a brief amicus curiae from the Columbia 31 River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission. Between them, they advance a host of arguments 32 asserting various inadequacies of the ballot title. We reject all but two of those 33 arguments without discussion.

1 The first of the two arguments that require discussion pertains to the 2 caption. The chief petitioners argue that the caption, as certified, "does not express the 3 principal change that the measure proposes: to ban commercial fishing with gillnets in 4 the Columbia River." According to the chief petitioners, the Attorney General "appears 5 to be trying to capture as many concepts as possible within the caption, but that effort 6 results in information that is too general to aid voters." The Attorney General responds 7 that there are too many effects of Initiative Petition 21 to single out one -- the ban on 8 gillnetting -- for mention in the caption and that mentioning only that the measure 9 concerns "specified * * * methods/procedures" of fishing is adequate to inform the voters 10 about the subject of the measure.

11 ORS 250.035(2)(a) requires the Attorney General to draft a 15-word 12 caption that "reasonably identifies the subject matter of the state measure." The "subject 13 matter" of a measure refers to "the 'actual major effect' of a measure or, if the measure 14 has more than one major effect, all such effects (to the limit of the available words)." 15 Whitsett v. Kroger, 348 Or 243, 247, 230 P3d 545 (2010). To identify the "actual major 16 effect" of a measure, this court looks to "the text of the proposed measure to determine 17 the changes that the proposed measure would enact in the context of existing law" and 18 then evaluates whether the caption "reasonably identifies those effects." Rasmussen v. 19 Kroger, 350 Or 281, 285, 253 P3d 1031 (2011).

20 A caption may describe accurately the actual major effect of a measure and 21 still not comply with the requirements of the statute if the description is "too vague and 22 gives voters no clear picture of what is at stake." Hunnicuttt/Stacey v. Myers, 343 Or 387,

1 391, 171 P3d 349 (2007). In Novick v. Myers, 330 Or 351, 7 P3d 518 (2000), for 2 example, the proposed initiative measure would have imposed different dollar limitations 3 on campaign contributions by different classes of contributors. The ballot title that the 4 Attorney General had certified, however, merely stated that the measure "limits certain 5 campaign contributions." Id. at 354. This court concluded that the caption failed to 6 convey the crux of the measure, which was to create a system of different contribution 7 limits for different classes of contributors: "The word 'certain' in the Attorney General's 8 caption fails to identify that significant characteristic of the subject matter of the 9 proposed measure." Id. at 356.

10 The Attorney General's certified ballot title caption in this case suffers from 11 a similar deficiency. It simply states that the measure would change unspecified "fishing 12 methods/procedures," when the actual subject of the measure is the prohibition of the 13 only method that current law allows -- namely, gillnetting -- and the authorization of 14 seine or fixed gear fishing in its place. As we have noted, the findings in the measure all 15 speak of the asserted deleterious consequences of gillnetting and of the need to move to 16 more selective fishing practices; no other subject is mentioned. The measure then states a 17 ban on gillnetting in the Columbia River, along with a concomitant ban on wholesale 18 purchasing of fish caught by gillnetting. As well, it provides that the ban on gillnetting 19 does not apply to tribal fishing. It authorizes the State Fish and Wildlife Commission to 20 adopt rules allowing the use of seines and fixed fishing gear as an alternative to 21 gillnetting, prohibits the issuance of gillnet vessel licenses, and requires the removal of 22 representatives of the gillnet fishing industry from the commission permit board. Other,

1 subsidiary effects certainly may be described, but each flows from the central effect of 2 the measure, which is the ban on gillnetting and the authorization of seine or fished gear
3 fishing in its place. We conclude that the caption, which fails to mention the actual major 4 effect of the measure, fails to substantially comply with the requirements of ORS 5 250.035(2)(a). As a result, the ballot title must be referred to the Attorney General for 6 modification.

7 The second of the two arguments that requires discussion in this opinion 8 pertains to the summary of the measure. The chief petitioners argue that the summary is 9 deficient because it inaccurately states that Initiative Petition 21 "may affect Columbia 10 River Compact, tribal fishing rights, and fishing management agreements between federal 11 government, tribes, and states." They assert that the Attorney General has improperly 12 speculated about situations that might cause a conflict between Initiative Petition 21 and 13 other sources of law regarding the use of the Columbia River. Moreover, the chief 14 petitioners observe, the summary conflicts with section 4 of Initiative Petition 21, which 15 provides that "[t]his 2012 Act does not affect" the Compact, the U.S. v. Oregon
16 agreement, or tribal fishing rights. (Emphasis added.)

17 Johnson takes the opposite position with respect to the portion of the 18 summary that refers to the potential conflicts between Initiative Petition 21 and other 19 sources of law. He argues that the summary fails to substantially comply with ORS 20 250.035(2)(d) because the Attorney General did not go far enough in describing what he 21 asserts is a direct and irreconcilable conflict between Initiative Petition 21 and the 22 Compact. In a similar vein, the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission agrees

1 with Johnson, asserting that "the proposed initiative's change to Oregon's fishery 2 management obligations is at odds with the language of the Compact." It does not 3 explain, however, why Initiative Petition 21 would be inconsistent with the Compact.

4 The Attorney General responds that, as evidenced by the conflicting 5 arguments set out by the chief petitioners, Johnson, and the commission, whether 6 Initiative Petition 21 will have an effect on the Compact, tribal fishing rights, and the 7 U.S. v. Oregon agreement is a disputed matter. The Attorney General argues that the 8 challenged phrase simply acknowledges the conflicting readings of Initiative Petition 21 9 and that the outcome of any future legal challenge regarding the potential conflict is 10 unknown. The Attorney General concludes that it was appropriate, and not speculative, 11 to point out to voters the possibility of a conflict with other important laws.

12 ORS 250.035(2)(d) provides that a ballot title summary be "[a] concise and 13 impartial statement of not more than 125 words summarizing the state measure and its 14 major effect." The function of the summary is "to provide voters with enough 15 information to understand what will happen if the measure is approved." Caruthers v. 16 Kroger, 347 Or 660, 670, 227 P3d 723 (2010). That information may include a 17 description of the effect of the measure at issue on other laws, so long as the description 18 is accurate. Berman v. Kroger, 347 Or 509, 514, 225 P3d 32 (2009). In all events, the 19 information must pertain to an identified, actual "effect" of enacting the measure; it is not 20 permissible to "speculate about the possible effects of a proposed measure." 21 Pelikan/Tauman v. Myers, 342 Or 383, 389, 153 P3d 117 (2007) (emphasis added); see 22 also Kain v. Myers \(S49089\), 333 Or 446, 450-51, 41 P3d 416 (2002) (ballot title need

1 not mention "conditional and conjectural" effects of proposed measure).

2 In this case, the summary that the Attorney General certified runs afoul of 3 that latter principle. In stating that the measure "may affect Columbia River Compact, 4 tribal fishing rights, and fishing management agreements," it merely speculates that there 5 is a possibility that the measure may affect the various laws and agreements listed in 6 entirely unspecified ways. A possibility that enactment of a measure may produce 7 unspecified consequences is not an "effect" within the meaning of ORS 250.035(2)(d).
8 The summary therefore does not substantially comply with the statutory requirement to 9 state the "effect" of the measure, and, for that additional reason, the ballot title must be 10 referred to the Attorney General for modification.

11 The ballot title is referred to the Attorney General for modification.
