

action to the prejudice of another.” Stilp v. Hafer, 718 A.2d 290, 292 (Pa. 1998) (citing Sprague v. Casey, 550 A.2d 184, 187 (Pa. 1988); see also Costello v. United States, 365 U.S. 265, 282 (1961); cf. Sprague, 550 A.2d at 188 (“He who seeks equity must do equity.”). Whether laches should apply is a fact-specific question to be determined case by case. See Leedom v. Thomas, 373 A.2d 1329, 1332 (Pa. 1977). A respondent who resorts to laches must establish two elements: First, the party must demonstrate a lack of diligence on behalf of the claimant. In that regard, “[t]he test is not what the plaintiff knows, but what he might have known by the use of the means of information within his reach with the vigilance the law requires of him.” Taylor v. Coggins, 90 A. 633, 635 (Pa. 1914). Second, the respondent must show an “injury or material prejudice” resulting from that delay. Gabster v. Mesaros, 220 A.2d 639, 641 (Pa. 1966).

Traditionally, “the defendant bears the burden to demonstrate that enforcing the plaintiff’s rights would be inequitable under the circumstances.” Sernovitz v. Dershaw, 127 A.3d 783, 791 (Pa. 2015). In the context of a challenge to the results of an election, however, due consideration must also be accorded to the rights of those voters who cast ballots in good faith reliance upon the laws passed by their elected representatives. See Hunter v. Hamilton Cty. Bd. of Elections, 635 F.3d 219, 243 (6th Cir. 2011) (“To disenfranchise citizens whose only error was relying on [state] instructions . . . [is] fundamentally unfair.”). Given the impracticality of joining as essential parties the millions of Pennsylvanians whose votes Petitioners seek to discard here, the judiciary must consider their interests when balancing the equities. Cf. Delisle v. Boockvar, 234 A.3d 410, 411 (Pa. 2020) (per curiam) (Wecht, J., concurring) (“[I]t cannot be gainsaid that there is no post hoc remedy sufficient to cure the arbitrary deprivation of the ‘right of suffrage,’ which ‘is a fundamental matter in a free and democratic society.’” (quoting Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 561-62 (1964)).<sup>2</sup>

Respondents’ recitations lay bare Petitioners’ want of diligence in this case. Petitioners could have brought this action at any time between October 31, 2019, when Governor Wolf signed Act 77 into law, and April 28, 2020, when this Court still retained exclusive jurisdiction over constitutional challenges to it. See Act 77 § 13(2)-(3). The claims then could have been adjudicated finally before the June primary, when no-excuse mail-in voting first took effect under Act 77—and certainly well before the General Election, when millions of Pennsylvania voters requested, received, and returned mail-in ballots for the first time. Petitioners certainly knew all facts relevant to their present claims during that entire period. Indeed, “the procedures used to enact [Act 77] were published in the Legislative Journal and available to the public” since at least October 2019. See Stilp, 718 A.2d at 294. Likewise, “[t]he provisions of the Constitution that the [General Assembly] purportedly violated were also readily available.” See id. And yet, Petitioners did nothing.<sup>3</sup> Petitioner Wanda Logan ran and lost in a special election in February after

Rev. 937, 998 (2005) (“Courts should see it as in the public interest in election law cases to aggressively apply laches so as to prevent litigants from securing options over election administration problems.”).

<sup>3</sup> Even worse, at least one Petitioner actively encouraged his supporters to cast mail-in ballots for him in his bid for Congress. See Ryan Deto, Sean Parnell is suing Pa. over mail-in voting, even though he praised mail-in voting earlier this year, PITTSBURGH CITY PAPER (Nov. 21, 2020), <https://www.pghcitypaper.com/pittsburgh/sean-parnell-is-suing-pa-over-mail-in-voting-even-though-he-praised-mail-in-voting-earlier-this-year/Content?oid=18413927>.

Act 77 took effect. And not only she, but U.S. Representative Mike Kelly and congressional candidate Sean Parnell also participated in the 2020 primary elections under Act 77, as modified by Act 12,<sup>4</sup> in June of this year.<sup>5</sup> But it occurred to none of them to challenge the constitutionality of Act 77 before then, or indeed before participating in and contemplating the results of the 2020 General Election.

Because “[a]n election is the embodiment of the popular will, the expression of the sovereign power of the people,” In re Wheelock’s Contested Election, 82 Pa. 297, 299 (1876), any request to invalidate its results must meet a high evidentiary threshold. See Soules v. Kauaians for Nukolii Campaign Comm., 849 F.2d 1176, 1180 (9th Cir. 1988) (“The voiding of a state election ‘is a drastic if not staggering’ remedy.”) (citation omitted). Extraordinary claims demand extraordinary proof. To that end, it is well-settled that to annul an election in this Commonwealth “requires proof of fraud or other unlawful practices of such magnitude and so interwoven with the casting and counting of the votes as to obviously deprive the election returns of all validity.” See Winograd v. Coombs, 20 A.2d 315, 316 (Pa. 1941); cf. Appeal of Zupsic, 670 A.2d 629, 638 (Pa. 1996); In re Ayre, 134 A. 477, 478 (Pa. 1926) (“To warrant throwing out the vote of an entire district[,] the disregard of the law must be so fundamental as to render it impossible to separate the lawful from the unlawful votes.”).

Petitioners cannot carry their enormous burden. They have failed to allege that even a single mail-in ballot was fraudulently cast or counted. Notably, these Petitioners sought to intervene in a federal lawsuit in which the campaign of President Donald J.

Trump—an ostensible beneficiary of Petitioners’ efforts to disenfranchise more than one-third of the Commonwealth’s electorate—explicitly disclaimed any allegation of fraud in the conduct of Pennsylvania’s General Election. See Donald J. Trump for President, Inc. v. Secretary Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, No. 20-3371 (3d Cir. Nov. 27, 2020), slip op. at 2 (“[A]s [Trump Presidential Campaign] lawyer Rudolph Giuliani stressed, the Campaign ‘doesn’t plead fraud. . . . [T]his is not a fraud case.’” (quoting Mot. To Dismiss Hr’g Tr. 118:19-20, 137:18)). The absence of fraud allegations from this matter—not to mention actual evidence of fraud—alone is fatal to Petitioners’ claims.

More importantly, though, there is no basis in law by which the courts may grant Petitioners’ request to ignore the results of an election and recommit the choice to the General Assembly to substitute its preferred slate of electors for the one chosen by a majority of Pennsylvania’s voters. The United States Constitution’s Presidential Electors Clause commands that “[e]ach State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 1, cl. 2. While the method of appointment varies somewhat by State,<sup>6</sup> see McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U.S. 1, 25-26 (1892) (describing alternative “method[s] of appoint[ing]” presidential electors), our General Assembly “direct[ed]” the “Manner” of appointing Pennsylvania’s electors by popular vote nearly a century ago pursuant to its broad lawmaking power.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>7</sup> Significantly, among the first election laws adopted by our Legislature in October 1788, following the Commonwealth’s ratification of the U.S. Constitution the previous prescribes the prevailing method of selecting the Commonwealth's electors:

Unchanged since its enactment in 1937, Article XV of the Election Code<sup>8</sup>

At the general election to be held in the year 1940, and every fourth year thereafter, there shall be elected by the qualified electors of the Commonwealth, persons to be known as electors of President and Vice-President of the United States, and referred to in this act as presidential electors, equal in number to the whole number of senators and representatives to which this State may be entitled in the Congress of the United States.

25 P.S. § 3191.<sup>9</sup> The Code further describes the electors' constitutional duties:

The electors chosen, as aforesaid, shall assemble at the seat of government of this Commonwealth, at 12 o'clock noon of the day which is, or may be, directed by the Congress of the United States,<sup>[10]</sup> and shall then and there perform the duties enjoined upon them by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Id. § 3192 (emphasis added). Lastly, the Code outlines the electors' power to replace a member of their delegation due to that member's death or "fail[ure] to attend at the seat of government at the time appointed by law," id. § 3193, and also establishes their entitlement to a per diem to compensate for travel expenses, id. § 3194 (providing for "the sum of three dollars for every day spent in traveling to, remaining at, and returning from December, was one providing for the popular election of presidential electors on a general ticket with congressional representatives. See 1 THE DOCUMENTARY HISTORY OF THE FIRST FEDERAL ELECTIONS, 1788-1790 at 281, 299-302 (Merrill Jensen & Robert A. Becker, eds., 1990).

<sup>9</sup> As far as ascertaining the specific identities of the electors, the Code elsewhere provides for their nomination by "[t]he nominee of each political party for the office of President of the United States." 25 P.S. § 2878.

<sup>10</sup> Federal law provides that "[t]he electors of President and Vice President of each State shall meet and give their votes on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December next following their appointment at such place in each State as the legislature of such State shall direct." 3 U.S.C. § 7. This year, electors shall meet in Harrisburg on December 14, 2020.

the place of meeting aforesaid, and . . . mileage at the rate of three cents per mile to and from his home”).

Conspicuously absent from the Election Code are any mechanisms by which to circumvent these procedures so as to permit the General Assembly to substitute its preferred slate of electors for that “elected by the qualified electors of the Commonwealth.” Id. § 3191. Thus, any effort to alter that “method of appointment,” McPherson, 146 U.S. at 25, at this late stage would require the adoption of new law in accordance with constitutional mandates, including presentment of the legislation to the governor to sign or veto. See PA. CONST. art. III, § 9; Wolf v. Scarnati, 233 A.3d 679, 687 (Pa. 2020); cf. Smiley v. Holm, 285 U.S. 355, 367-68 (1932) (holding “that the exercise of the authority” to regulate federal elections conferred upon state legislatures by the federal Constitution “must be in accordance with the method which the state has prescribed for legislative enactments,” including observance of “the veto power”); Arizona State Legislature v. Arizona Indep. Redistricting Comm’n, 576 U.S. 787, 807-08 (2015).<sup>11</sup>

In any event, even if the Legislature were inclined to intervene, Petitioners’ efforts would be futile with respect to the foregoing election regardless. Congress has declared that each State’s method “for its final determination of any controversy or contest concerning the appointment of all or any of the electors of such State” must have been established “by laws enacted prior to the day fixed for the appointment of the electors”—

i.e., before November 3, 2020. See 3 U.S.C. § 5 (emphasis added). Accordingly, to persist in seeking to overturn the result of any election by legislative putsch is a fool’s errand—and an arguably unconstitutional one at that. See PA. CONST. art. I, § 5 (“Elections shall be free and equal; and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.”).

Having delayed this suit until two elections were conducted under Act 77’s new, no-excuse mail-in voting system, Petitioners—several of whom participated in primary elections under this system without complaint—play a dangerous game at the expense of every Pennsylvania voter. Petitioners waived their opportunity to challenge Act 77 before the election, choosing instead to “lay by and gamble upon receiving a favorable decision of the electorate.” Toney v. White, 488 F.2d 310, 314 (5th Cir. 1973) (en banc). Unsatisfied with the results of that wager, they would now flip over the table, scattering to the shadows the votes of millions of Pennsylvanians. It is not our role to lend legitimacy to such transparent and untimely efforts to subvert the will of Pennsylvania voters.<sup>12</sup> Courts should not decide elections when the will of the voters is clear.
